You'd Like the Desert Self Flying Airplane Hiring Mexicans Mild Climate Factories

— By Arthur Brisbane —

HODGE, Mojave Desert, Cal., Jan. 26.—Interesting place this desert with marvelously fertile soil when water is added. The writer has five thousand acres here, raises alfalfa, seems to nine tons to the acre per season, loses money at it and does not advise anybody to buy land here unless he wants to lose money or work the land himself.

But for climate, beautiful hills and mountains, strange animals, jack rabbits, coyotes, lynx and horned toads, giant desert turtles, armored cactus and for contemplation in solitude of "life, death and the vast eternity," no better place could be found.

Amos and Andy penetrate the solitude, competing with Walter Damrosch's concert and the carefree words of "happy days are come again" if you care to tune in. In homesteaders' cottages the supper hour is arranged to fit the Eastern time of the household radio favorites.

And through the day while the man irrigates the wife listens to all the news, about fashions, prices of eggs, weather, politics, crime, etc.

Insanity among farmers' wives has fallen off more than 60 per cent. Thanks to five great services: RURAL MAIL DELIVERY, AUTOMOBILE, TELEPHONE, TALKING MACHINE, AND ABOVE ALL, RADIO.

Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, now in Los Angeles, is invited to meet at luncheon everybody that is anybody. He will be asked for further details of the automatic, self-controlling flying machine on which the laboratories at Schenectady have been working in connection with the Sperry Gyroscope Co. If hopes are realized that self-protecting planes will be safe from crashing in fog. The sonic altimeter brings the machine down safely to within three or four feet of the earth in the thickest fog, enabling the pilot to land the machine, knowing his exact distance above ground.

A German invention, the radio eye, picks up the beacon light of a landing field, even in fog, three miles farther away than the pilot can see it, letting him know that it is there, and indicates to him a straight line to that beacon. What men are determined to do, they can do. And they are determined to fly safely. Thanks to science, financed and encouraged by giant corporations, with resources unlimited, they will do it.

Complaint is heard here and elsewhere, of "favoritism in hiring Mexicans." There is no such favoritism, but Mexicans are hired, in some cases exclusively on work that the United States-born cannot or will not do. They do not care, for instance, 16 lug heavy rails, in relaying railroad tracks. And in Arizona, cotton growers find that "Americans" will not pick cotton at prevailing prices of three cents a pound, made necessary by the selling price of cotton. Mexicans and colored men do pick it.

It is not unusual to see Americans asking for "the price of a cup of coffee," close to a cotton field where they could earn the price of many cups. Specialized work for certain races is not new in America. At one time, immigrants from Ireland did the hard work, "beyant on the old railway." Italians took that work from the Irish and laid most of the railroad trackage in the United States where there were no Chinese to compete. New Mexicans do the work that Irish and Italians did formerly, and it is fortunate that they can and will do the work, for the nation's welfare demands that it be done. To prevent it would simply mean forcing and hastening labor saving machinery, that would mean cutting down employment.

A quarter of a mile from this spot on the Mojave desert, rails are laid by an inexpensive machine, with crane attached, that eliminates 23 men on each job and does the work with absolute accuracy.

This country is asked to join the League of Nations in a fight against slavery in Liberia. Cynics suggest that the sudden excitement about Liberia slavery is based on a desire to discourage rubber plantations started in Liberia by Americans, to compete with British rubber and other production. Slave labor, which can be bought or hired in Liberia is cheaper than any.

However, Harvey Firestone, biggest American rubber grower in Liberia, with a million acres now planting, has also urged the American government to fight Liberian slavery. American manufacturers depend on indus-

2 Women in Suicide Pact; 1 Dead, 1 Near Death

DEFENSE CALLS SULLIVAN'S WIFE

WOMAN DEAD; OTHER DYING IN GAS PACT

Note and an Open Bible Found Alongside Bodies in Back Bay Apartment

An open Bible and a note providing for the disposition of their remains beside them, the body of Mrs. Merle Sargent, 50, and the unconscious form of Miss Gertrude Higdon, 32, were found today in a gas-filled apartment at 56 Falmouth st.

Cracks around doors and some had been plugged with paper, and gas was pouring from an open jet on a stove through a tube, one end of which had dropped from the rider beneath a mouth.

An opened umbrella had been spread over the two women, apparently with the idea of confining the gas so that it would act rapidly.

BOTH FROM HOLLYWOOD

Firemen armed with pulmotors worked over the two women and partially revived the younger, who was rushed to City Hospital and placed on the danger list.

The two women were from Hollywood, Cal., it was learned, and according to the note left by Mrs. Sargent were penniless and despondent. The note asked that their bodies be cremated at Forest Hills.

According to police Mrs. Sargent's mother, Mrs. Cora Voak, lives at 5272 Hollywood blvd., Hollywood, Cal.

The discovery was made by Mrs. C Etta Smith, the landlady, whose attention was called to an odor of gas by the janitor. Tracing the odor to the suite occupied by Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Smith opened the door with a pass key.

Throwing open doors and windows, the landlady found the two women slumped against the gas stove on the floor of the kitchenette.

POLICE SUMMONED

The police were called and summoned members of Ladder 15, who responded with pulmotors.

Mrs. Sargent failed to respond to treatment, but Miss Higdon, who was at the point of death when firemen arrived, at length began to breathe naturally and was hurried to the hospital.

There she was identified by Charles H. Welch, Back Bay churchman, who said he had met Miss Higdon through Mrs. Sargent, with whom she was making her home.

Later the body of Mrs. Sargent was also taken to the City Hospital, where she was pronounced dead.

Bishop's Niece in Suit

CHARGING CRUELTY, he suit of Mrs. Mary Hemenway Callan for divorce from Rev. John J. Callan opened in Dedham today. She is a niece of Bishop William Lawrence, retired head of the Boston Episcopal diocese. Cocktail drinking was admitted by the former rector.

REV. JOHN J. CALLAN

BUSINESS VIEW BETTER—WOODS

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—A more general feeling of optimism over unemployment was declared today by Chairman Woods, of the President's committee for unemployment, to exist among business leaders. His statement was in connection with the committee findings that between 4,500,000 and 5,000,000 workers were idle at the end of the first week in December.

"The highest business authorities are considerably more cheerful over the prospect at present than they were when that count was made," he said.

SEN. EDWARDS IS SUICIDE

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 26 (AP)—Edward I. Edwards, former governor of New Jersey and former United States Senator, died today from a self-inflicted bullet wound.

He shot himself last night while alone in his bedroom at his Kensington ave. home. His son, Irving Edwards, said his father had been suffering from ill health and despondency for several months.

A sealed letter to his daughter, Elizabeth, was left by Edwards. Police said Miss Edwards collapsed when notified of the letter and did not immediately open it. It was believed to contain an explanation for his suicide.

In 1920 Edwards' assertion that he would make New Jersey "as wet as the Atlantic ocean" caused him to be mentioned as an anti-prohibition hope for the Democratic presidential nomination. But in 1928 he was defeated for re-election to the United States Senate. He was a total abstainer.

His financial position suffered because of troubles of the New Jersey Securities Co., of which he was president. The organization, which owned several banks in Northern New Jersey, went into receivership in 1929, and its chief stockholder, Harry M. Weinberger, subsequently was indicted for fraud.

COCKTAILS PEP UP EX-RECTOR'S LOVE BATTLE

Rev. Mr. Callan Admits Drinking; Says He Slapped Niece of Bishop Several Times

Admission that he became intoxicated on cocktails and slapped his wife was made in probate court at Dedham today by John J. Callan, former Episcopal clergyman, defending himself against divorce charges of Mrs. Mary Hemenway Callan, prominent member of Boston's younger society set.

Mrs. Callan is a niece of Bishop William Lawrence, retired head of the Episcopal diocese of Boston. Her husband, at the time covered by the divorce testimony was a professor at the couple's home in Wellesley, where he had been rector at St. Andrew's.

Callan declared that when his wife found him under the influence of liquor she pushed him down twice and kicked him in the stomach when he approached to light her cigarette.

"PROBABLY INTOXICATED"

He said he got "probably intoxicated" that night—June 4, 1930—while suffering from a concussion of the brain sustained while riding horseback. He did not fall from the horse, but his head struck the horse in taking a jump, he said.

The Callan cocktail shaker was produced in court during the day's session and identified.

Callan was called as a witness by his wife's attorney, Edward F. McClennen, and therefore testified in advance of his wife.

A former maid testified to serving cocktails at the Callan home, and a nurse told of being invited by Callan to drink. She said he invited the cook, too.

Callan testified his wife left the house clad in a nightgown and pink wrap one night after an argument in which she accused him of being "rotten drunk."

He said he ran his fortune up to $1,320,000 before the stock market crash, but there was a discussion between the lawyers as to whether this was his money or hers.

BIG STOCK OF LIQUOR.

His wife left him with their three children last October 16, Callan said, and the next day, much to his surprise, she sued for divorce.

He said later he found champagne, gin, port and light wines

Generalissimo of the Allied Armies During the Last Phases of the World War

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott

As the days went by, I got to know my troops better. I had not been with them during the battles they had fought in Belgium, but I now began to comprehend the impression this severe experience had left on the men.

The Morocean division (General Humbert) of the Ninth Corps had been engaged in violent combats for several days and had suffered heavily. It remained full of spirit but needed reinforcement. The Seventeenth Division (General Guignabaudet) of that corps had been less tried.

The severe ordeals experienced by the Eleventh Corps, especially at Maisnil, had left their mark on the men. Many officers had been killed, and in the Breton regiments especially the soldiers were constantly asking for officers to be sent to lead them against the enemy once more.

The Forty-second Division was in excellent order. It had only recently arrived, was very well commanded and had not been through any costly experiences. The reserve divisions had been plunged, immediately upon their arrival, into a battle lasting several days, and this had considerably shaken them. Many of their officers were inexperi-

STATE RESTS ITS CASE AGAINST GARRETT

Last Prosecution Witness Says Bank Slips Were Written by Ex-Raider

The Commonwealth rested its case at the Garrett trial at 3:35 o'clock this afternoon.

The defense was prepared to go on tomorrow morning with an array of witnesses including Mrs. John F. Sullivan, wife of the Hotel Ritz proprietor, chief government witness. She was subpoenaed by the defense.

Immediately following the close of the government's case, Judge Patrick Keating instructed the jury which has heard the evidence against Olive B. Garrett, ex-police raider, his wife and Lillian V. Hatch, to disregard certain evidence.

This was the assertion of Sullivan, claimed victim of an extortion conspiracy entered into by the trio, that he had been told Miss Hatch boasted that if he interfered with her Garrett would close the Ritz.

CONFERENCE CALLED

Garrett's attorney, Herbert F. Callahan moved that the testimony of Asst. Atty.-Gen. George E. Lourie be stricken from the record and that Sullivan's testimony regarding he made to Harry Adams, hotel employe, also be expunged.

A conference of all counsel with Judge Keating followed the motion.

Following the conference, the court again adressed the jury and ordered out the testimony of J. Edward Callanan, Newton realtor, that Miss Hatch had called on him in 1929 or 1930 for a contribution.

When Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle announced the close of the prosecution's side, the trial was in its 14th day.

EXPERT ON STAND

Wilbur F. Turner, handwriting expert, who was the last government witness, occupis dthe stand during the entire day. He testified further to his opinion that Garrett wrote deposit slips for his wife's bank accounts, and during his cross-examination by both Callahan and Daniel J. Gallagher there were some lively passages.

Mrs. Sullivan was served with a subpoena at her Newbury st., Back Bay, home by Constable John H. Brady. A relative, Miss Phoebe Nicholson, was also summoned by the defense.

Others who have been called—and it is reported the defense has between 50 and 60 witnesses—are Dr. Clarence Bonner, superintendent of the Danvsr State Hospital, and a representative of the Boston licensing board.

Seven police were on hand to testify. Five of them, reporting to Supt. Michael H. Crowley that they had been subpoenaed, were told "Tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

They were Sergt. Arthur Timmins and Patrolmen John Regan, David Roach, Joseph Clark and Jeremiah Sheehan. Two others

Daisy Gets Week's Respite; Clara Pleads for Her

Los Angeles, Jan. 26 (AP)—Sentencing of Daisy De Voe for the theft of $825 from Clara Bow was postponed today until next Monday by Judge Doran when defense counsel made a motion for a new trial and asked a delay to permit preparation of arguments.

Miss De Voe, looking tired and depressed, was in court in custody of a matron.

Mrs. Ida De Voe, mother of Daisy, collapsed from nervousness as her daughter was led back to jail. Friends revived her.

A letter was received by Dist. Atty. Buron Fitts from Clara, expressing her hope that mercy will be shown. It read:

"My Dear Mr. Fitts:

"I am not sure to whom this letter should be addressed, or whether it is even proper under the circumstance to even write it, but I find myself unable to avoid letting you know that it is my hope that mercy be shown to Daisy De Voe.

"The fact is that I never would have called this matter to your attention in the first place if Daisy De Voe had not threatened me and I had no other way to protect myself except to come to your office and follow your advice.

"If it is right for you to do so I wish you would tell the judge about this letter.

"Sincerely Yours,

"CLARA BOW."

The alleged threat referred to Miss Bow's charge that Miss De Voe had attempted to collect $125,000 from her for the return of her love letters.

Mrs. Claudine Brock, housekeeper for the actress, said Miss Bow is still sick from a cold, although feeling better.

WICKERSHAM BOARD 7 TO 4 FOR IMMEDIATE DRY LAW REVISION

MACKINTOSH TELLS REAL STANDING

Seattle Member Says Minority Also Is for a Change if Enforcement Fails

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Tydings resolution proposing a Senate inquiry into the "constructive recommendations" of the Wickersham Commission was laid aside today by the Senate after it had encountered outspoken opposition.

Seattle, Jan. 26 (AP)—Kenneth Mackintosh, a member of the Wickersham commission, said on his return here today that seven members of the law enforcement body favored a change in prohibition as soon as possible. He did not name the seven.

Mackintosh said also:

"The four other members having still a hope which they designate as a pious one, that a change in organization may bring a reasonable degree of enforcement, nevertheless favor revision if that hope is not fulfilled."

CONDITIONS UNBELIEVABLE"

He added that the commission's report "gave full value to all the good resulting from prohibition, but was more than conservative in reporting the bad featured so as to avoid attack on the ground that we deliberately exaggerated conditions.

"We found conditions almost unbelievable," Mackintosh said. "There unquestionably is more drinking among young people than before prohibition. Prohibition has raised the drinker from the gutter and put him in good society."

FOR IMMEDIATE CHANGE

Although in his individual report Mackintosh recommended a change in the dry law if further enforcement efforts were not productive, he said he had since taken the stand the law could not be enforced and that a change should be made now.

The Seattle member said if "the Eighteenth Amendment were changed to permit "regulation or prohibition" instead of outright prohibition of beverage liquor, the problem would be solved.

Congress Move for Dry Referendum Predicted

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—An early move to consolidate Republican sentiment in Congress, both wet and dry, upon proposals for a nationwide prohibition referendum—already advocated by members of the Wickersham Commission—was forecast today in high congressional quarters.

There was no expectation, however, of voting on any referendum proposal at this session.

The Howell bill for a District of Columbia enforcement act is furnishing the Senate with opportunities for prohibition debate of a general nature, but it is not being taken earnestly as an opportunity for a showdown on the national issue.

COMMITTEE IS 8 TO 3 AGAINST POWER BOARD

Votes for Resolution to Test Three Members' Right to Hold Office

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Senate Judiciary Committee voted, 8 to 3, today for the Walsh resolution requesting District Attorney Rover here to institute proceedings testing the right of the three disputed members of the Power Commission to retain office.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, author of the resolution, will seek prompt Senate action.

The resolution requests Rover to institute proceedings against Chairman Smith and Commissioners Garsaud and Draper of the Power Commission.

Atty.-Gen. Mitchell has ruled that Mr. Hoover is without authority to return the nominations to the Senate which confirmed the men once.

Those who voted for the Walsh resolution in committee are: Republicans, Norris, Nebraska; Blaine, Wisconsin, and Steiwer, Oregon. Democrats, Walsh, King, Utah; Stephens, Mississippi; Dill, Washington, and Bratton, New Mexico.

Those opposed were Deneen, Illinois; Gillett, Massachusetts, and Hastings, Delaware, all Republicans.

3,598,000 Certificates Have Been Issued, He Tells the Senate Committee

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—Veteran Administrator Hines testified today before the Senate finance committee that cash payment of veterans compensation certificates would involve $3,528,022,000.

He was the first witness after the committee had voted unanimously to go forward with hearings on Senate proposals, despite insistence of House leaders that proposals to pay the certificates was revenue-raising legislation and should originate in that branch.

Senator Watson, the Republican leader, presided in the absence of Senator Smoot, who was ill.

The action of the American Legion's executive committee in Indianapolis yesterday, endorsing the principle of immediate retirement of the certificates, received the notice of both Senate and House leaders.

STUDY CONVERSION BILLS.

Republican Leader Tilson said the House ways and means committee had arranged to start studying all converting bills—of which there are about 50—the latter part of the week.

Democratic Leader Garner, author of a cash payment plan, said he assumed "this means action at this session." His bill would pay the veterans the present surrender value of their certificates, at their petition.

Estimating 60 per cent would seek conversion, he believed it would cost $1,200,000,000.

Secretary Mellon has reported to the House committee it would cost "$2,000,000,000, more or less."

3,598,000 ISSUED.

Before the Senate committee, Hines said 3,598,000 certificates had been issued and estimated 300,000 veterans have made no applications.

The Government has paid out $101,000,000 in matured certificates, leaving 3,397,973 outstanding.

The loan value of all outstanding certificates, Hines testified, is $730,905,000 or an average of $216.

The average amount of indebtedness on each certificate is $181. Loans, he said, are made to 1,384,036 veterans, amounting to $258,131,316 or 22 per cent of the face value of the certificates.

Hines testified 40 per cent of the veterans who are eligible have received loans. The total value of the fund which the Government is accumulating to pay off certificates at maturity amounted on Jan. 1, to $777,550,000. The Government is contributing about $112,600,000 a year to the fund, Hines said, to make enough to pay off the certificates in 1945.

LOANS INCREASING

The veterans' administrator testified loans to veterans this year are "far away in excess" of the loans of last year.

Loans so far this month, he said, have averaged $1,000,000 a day, which has led him to estimate loans this year will run $20,000,000 a month instead of $8,000,000.

Hines said the demand for loans is general and is not restricted to any section of the country. The requests for loans are coming from veterans who have never borrowed before as well as those who have, he said.

"We are ready to do business, however," he added.

Baltimore, Jan. 26 (AP)—An internal fight for control of the Ward Baking Company and the Ward Baking Corp., a holding concern, neared a climax today as stockholders held a special meeting to vote on a change in management.

Claiming control of more than 60 per cent of the outstanding voting stock, a faction represented among the directors by C. R. Comstock, New York, and E. W. Gwinner, Pittsburgh, announced it sought the removal of Ralph S. Kent and William C. Evans, president and chairman of the board.

Callan said his wife bought the cocktail shaker and frequently brought home wine but kept the key of the wine room.

Attorney John P. Feeney, his counsel, in a statement to the court, admitted that Callan's conduct on the night of the slaps was unjustified, but claimed that it did not constitute cruel and abusive treatment.

SHE BOUGHT CIGARETTES

Mrs. Callan, who alleges cruelty in her application for a divorce, was in court, waiting to testify.

Other testimony brought out that on the night of the row in the Callan home, Mrs. Callan went to a drugstore, borrowed $5 from the druggist and bought cigarettes with part of this loan.

"On June 4, last year, I was riding at Chestnut Hill and was knocked unconscious," Callan testified. "Going over a jump, my head struck the horse and I was knocked out although I remained in the saddle.

"I found myself in the stable later and must have unbridled and unsaddled the horse while still unconscious. I went home and made some cocktails and sat down to wait for my wife.

"These were made of gin, orange juice and dry martini. I drank several cocktails while waiting. The cook came in and said dinner was ready, but I refused to eat without Mrs. Callan.

"When she finally arrived about 9:30 in the evening I was under the influence and was also suffering from a concussion. I had put on my dressing gown. My wife took me by the lapel and shook me and pushed me against the sofa. I fell, got up and remonstrated, with her and was pushed again. This time I hit my head when I fell.

"I slapped her face. She went across the room and sat down and I gave her a cigarette and started to light it for her. She raised her foot and pushed me in the stomach. I slapped her on the forearm.

BED OUT IN YARD

"I have no recollection of anything else that I did that night. I slept in a spare bed, where I found myself the next morning. I was probably intoxicated."

Callan was then questioned about testimony given earlier in the day by Lens Richards of Boston, a maid, who said she was kept awake by hammering that night and the next morning found the Callans bed out in the yard and on it a photograph of Mrs. Callan with the glass smashed.

Callan said he saw the bed outdoors when he got up but he did not remember putting it there. He said it was little damaged except for a couple of cuts which might have been made by an axe.

Callan denied striking his wife with his clenched fist or using profane language. He said he slapped her twice, once with the palm of his hand and the other time with the back of it.

He said he was not in sufficient possession of his faculties to know whether or not the skin was broken.

HER FACE BRUISED

Under questioning by Atty. McClennan, Patrick J. Fitzpatrick, Wellesley druggist, told of Mrs. Callan's call at his store on June 4, 1930.

"There were two cuts, one on one cheek near the mouth and the other on the other cheek. Ordinarily she is particularly calm, but that day she was very excited and nervous. I got the impression she had suffered from some kind of a shock."

Taking the witness for cross-examination, Attorney Feeney asked:

"What was the nature of the business transaction Mrs. Callan was there for?"

LOAN IS REPAID

"Well," replied Fitzpatrick, "she wanted to borrow $5, which I let her have, and then she bought a package of cigarettes."

"Was the loan repaid?"

"Yes, but I don't recall who repaid it, whether it was Mrs. Callan or her husband. The cigarettes were paid for at the same time."

Callan is an Englishman by birth. In 1918 he resigned an army commission to enter the ministry in Canada, and when war broke out he was made an army chaplain. Before going to France he was married to Miss Isabelle Hewett of Toronto.

WIFE IN SOCIETY.

After the armistice he returned to Canada and went into business, but returned to the ministry in 1922. The Rev. Malcolm Peabody, son of the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody head of Groton school, whose wife divorced him in France, obtained him a rectorate at Lowell and later at Wellesley and after the first Mrs. Callan died introduced him to Miss Hemenway.

The death of one of the clergyman's daughters served to bring the couple closer together. The present Mrs. Callan is the daughter of Augustus Hemenway of Clarendon st., Back Bay. She is a member of the Vincent and Chilton clubs.

In Los Angeles, over the mountains, west of here, new factories are constantly starting, and those planning new manufacturing units should consider the possibilities of profit making in all-year-round climate conditions.

This applies to the Pacific coast, the Gulf coast, Florida, Georgia and other states. The worker is happy in such a climate, he buys no fuel, his living costs are low, intelligent labor is plentiful. And the constant influx of those that have accumulated money elsewhere and come to spend it creates a steadily growing local market. The local buyer naturally gives preference to goods that employ labor in his own territory.

Every manufacturing corporation with nation-wide distribution, should have an all-year-round mild climate plant, and some might well have half a dozen. Probably Mr. Swope has come here, this time, to expand General Electric activities. Myron Taylor and Mr. Farrell of United States Steel already are on this coast in a big way now, having purchased the largest Pacific steel concern. If steel manufacture by electric process, which U. S. Steel is developing, comes up to expectations, making available refractory ores and the unlimited supplies of iron bearing sands, on the Pacific shore, California may rank with Pennsylvania as an iron state, using hydro-electric power or oil, instead of coal.

A Texas jury has convicted Mrs. Clara Uhr of murder, and she will be executed, unless Texas says no. There is nothing to be said in the woman's behalf, except that she is a woman.

A soldier, Lexie Jones, of Fort Sam Houston, swore that Mrs. Uhr paid him $500 to kill her husband, and left an axe where he could get it. The unfortunate man was murdered as he lay bedridden by a stroke of paralysis. But Texas in all its history has never executed a woman. Many believe that public opinion will refuse to change that record.

PROVIDENCE PLEADS THAT N. E. LET VAN SWERINGEN LINES IN

SEE OLD RAIL TRADITION AS PERIL

Six Great Trunk Lines Would Revive Commerce, France Tells Associated Industries

By JOHN T. LAMBERT.

A plea to the business interests of New England to throw off "the dead hand of tradition" and to urge, rather than to block, the proposed entry of the Van Swaringens' railroad system was made to the Associated Industries of Massachusetts here today.

The plea was lodged by Clemens J. France and an imposing delegation of business, industrial and railroad experts representing the Providence Chamber of Commerce.

New England is on the verge of a massive business revival, France said.

Her seaports are her greatest natural asset, he declared, and she can become one of the greatest railroad and shipping centers of the world for the export of her own products as well as for the products of the nation.

WARNS OF ISOLATION

Six great trunk lines of railroads want to engage in New England's business and to promote her business by free competition, he said, and unless they are all permitted to enter she will stay forever a dead-end terminal instead of a junction point between railroad shipping from the West and steamship lines to Europe and South America.

The most significant economic news of the year, France said, is that the Pennsylvania Railroad proposes to operate steamships of its own in foreign trade. The New England ports are the ones they should be encouraged to employ, he declared.

"If we shut out the Pennsylvania and the Van Sweringens, who are now knocking at New England's door," said France, "we will find New England not only isolated from the interior markets of the United States, but isolated from the rapidly-growing markets of the world.

"And we should be ready when the United States starts on the new era of world trade which bids fair to make this country the largest exporter of manufactured goods and the largest importer of raw materials the world has ever seen.

"TRADITION IS PERIL"

"One great obstacle stands in the way of New England's reaping this exceptional opportunity. This is the dead hand of tradition which rests upon New England. It is a tradition which proposes that New England shall have its own independent system of railroads,' which would be, in effect, a system of terminal railroads now discarded as obsolete in every other section of the United States.

"Contrast New England with the condition existing elsewhere where four or five giant lines of railroads serve the growing states and sections of the country."

France said the six great trunk lines should enter New England substantially in the following manner:

The Pennsylvania and the Baltimore & Ohio over the Shore Line and the Inboard Line of the New Haven.

The New York Central over the Boston & Albany.

The Van Sweringens' Nickel Plate-Chesapeake & Ohio system over the Boston & Maine via the Fitchburg Division of the Boston & Maine.

The Canadian National over the Central Vermont and the Canadian Pacific over the Boston & Maine to Portland and Boston.

TO REVIVE S. N. E. LINE

Boston thus would be an important port of the six lines, he said. Providence would have two systems instead of putting all its eggs into the New Haven basket, and the whole of New England would be greatly served.

As an incidental feature, the Van Sweringens would revive the Southern New England Railroad, on which $5,000,000 was expended before it was abandoned. France said and by the expenditure of another $6,000,000 would establish a new railroad link between Worcester, Palmer and Providence.

France said the Providence Chamber of Commerce visualizes the future greatness of New England and has as yet won for itself only the castigation of being a catspaw for the Van Sweringen interests.

The Providence delegation consisted of President William W. Moss, former Mayor Joseph H. Gainer, Samuel B. Swan, Richard B Watrous and Edward C. Southwick, all officers of the Chamber of Commerce.

Their plea for the New England railroad development was heard behind closed doors by the transportation and railroad committees of the Associated Industries. The Providence advocates also presented their appeal to a noon luncheon of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

High C's of Chicago Opera Company Here to Thrill Boston Music Lovers for Two Weeks

LONG JAUNT ENDED. Boston was a welcome sight today to Jeanie Taurel after the long ride from Chicago. Jeanie was one of 285 members of the Chicago Civic Opera Company to arrive here today for a two-week stay. (Staff photos.)

LOLITA CORTIS ANTONIO CORTIS

OPERA CAREER AHEAD. Tiny Lolita Cortis, 2, is the pet of the entire company. The child, already pointed for an operatic career, is held by her father, Antonio Cortis, noted tenor of the company.

Opera Stars, 285 Strong, Here for Two Weeks' Stay

Chicago's "Battalion of Song" arrived in bulk in Boston today, 285 in number, for the opening of the Chicago Civic Opera company's two weeks of repertoire at the Boston Opera House.

The vanguard of the company, composed of most of the principals who appear in the opening piece, 'Lohengrin," tonight, arrived yesterday to prepare for the Boston premiere.

MARK OPENING OF TOUR

Boston's two weeks of opera mark the opening of the opera company's nineteenth national tour, during which will be visited Pittsburgh, Louisville, Memphis, Tulsa, Dallas, San Antonio, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Ore., and Lincoln, Neb.

A throng of several hundred, most of them girls, welcomed the opera singers, ballet dancers and musicians when the two special trains pulled into Huntington ave. station.

There are more singers of the company, this year, making either their debut with the Chicago troupe or making their operatic debut in Boston than ever before.

Best known among these operatic newcomers is John Charles Thomas, former star of many musical plays and operettas, among them "Maytime" and "Apple Blossoms," and since then in concert work.

Others making their debut in one way or the other are Jeanie Tourel, a vivacious French girl playing minor roles; Sonia Sharnova, who makes her debut in "Die Meistersingers" at Wednesday's matinee; Maria Radii and Emma Redell, who has the leading role in tonight's performance.

In today's arrivals were 135 principals, chorus members and ballet dancers and 150 members of the orchestra.

The first section of the train pulled in at 9 a. m. and the second followed 10 minutes later—and for a time there was plenty of excitement at the station.

GREETED BY FRIENDS.

Among the first to be welcomed by Boston friends were Frida Leider, who opens at the Saturday matinee in the lead of "Don Giovanni," and Maria Claessens, who has supported more prima donnas than any, other woman in opera and who has been Mary Garden's stage mother more times than either can count.

When Antonio Cortis, noted tenor, stepped from the train with his wife, Dolores, he carried in his arms little Lolita Cortis, two years old, but already pointed for an operatic career.

Maestro Emil Cooper, famous conductor, was one of the last to alight among his musicians, and with him were his fellow conductor, Charles Lauwers, Octave Dua and Virgilio Lazzari.

The Chicago Civic Opera Company repertoire this year includes 23 operas and the tour will end March 18.

MRS. PEABODY FOR 3D PARTY

Newark, N. J., Jan. 26 (AP)—Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, who left Massachusetts because she would "not be represented by men who defy the Constitution and break its law," advocated a third political party in a message read today before the New Jersey branch of the National Law Eenforcement committee.

"It is high time," she wrote, "that there should be a third party of women—daughters of the Constitution—who will lead in a coalition constitutional party, regardless of sections or allegiance to party candidates. There is no question in my mind that we are facing the most determined and seditious assault on our government."

CANADA QUERIES U. S. ON KILLING

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Canadian government wants information from the American government on the Coast Guard's action in firing on the Josephine K. in which the latter's captain lost his life, off the Jersey coast Saturday.

Hume Wrong, Canadian charge d'affaires, made the request today in a conference with Assistant Secretary Castle at the State Department. No report had been received from the Treasury, which has jurisdiction over the Coast Guard.

Previously, however, Assistant Secretary Lowman—of the Treasury—had called at the White House. He issued a statement saying the Coast Guard "was performing its statutory duty in prevention of smuggling" in the capture of the Canadian schooner.

Killing Ended Five-Mile Chase by Coast Guard

New York, Jan. 26.—A rum-running drama in which a ship captain was mortally wounded by a one-pound shot and his vessel captured by a coast guard cutter after a five-mile chase up the lower bay has become the subject of exchanges between the United States and Canada.

Capt. William P. Cluett, 39, of Lunenberg, Nova Scotia, died in the Marine hospital on Staten Island, Sunday morning, though his right leg had been amputated in an effort to save him.

A board of officers was empaneled this morning at the Staten Island Coast Guard base to inquire into the circumstances of the wounding of Capt. Cluett.

Capt. Randolph Ridgley, in command of the local coast guard, expressed the belief after a preliminary investigation, that the commander of the 145 acted according to instructions.

Canadian Rum Skipper Killed in Coast Guard Chase

RUM ROW CHASE, off Sandy Hook, between the Canadian rum-runner, Josephine K., and coast guard craft, ended when William P. Cluett, master of the Canadian craft, was fatally wounded when a one-pound shell crashed through the pilot house. The Josephine K. had liquor valued at $300,000 aboard. The shell-riddled rum craft is shown tied up alongside the coast guard craft that captured it after one of the longest chases in rum-running history. (Int'l photo.)

U. S. Senator Loses $68,000 to Racing Swindlers

Chicago, Jan. 26 (AP)—Reports that Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blackledge, former internal revenue collector, was but one of many recent prominent victims fleeced of huge sums by a ring of confidence men were circulated today.

The Herald and Examiner said three groups of swindlers had robbed their victims of more than $250,000 in the last six months. An unnamed United States Senator, the paper said, lost $68,000 in a racing racket, while David Tinkham, an Englishman, gave up $33,000 in a stock swindle.

Another victim, a Chicago business leader, identity not revealed, was swindled out of $90,000 but regained $82,000 in a compromise with the swindlers, who involved him in a faro game—a racket similar to the one in which Mrs. Blackledge reported that she lost $50,000 borrowed from Edward R. Litsinger, prominent Chicagoan, in a Springfield, Ill., hotel.

POLICE ON TRAIL

Julius Frank, a German, lost $50,000, and a dozen other men, all prominent in business, politics or society, paid sums ranging from $1000 to $60,000.

Confidence game experts of the police department were represented as optimistic that they were on the trail of the Blackledge-Litsinger card sharks and that if caught they will be able to throw further light on the other swindles.

GANDHI FREED; STARTS FOR BOMBAY

London, Jan. 26 (AP)—Premier Ramsay MacDonald warned the House of Commons today that unless Great Britain is willing to continue peaceful negotiations for the settlement of the Indian problem, British soldiers must be prepared to subdue by force, not only the Indian masses, but also the spirit of the time."

Poona, India, Jan. 26 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi, frail 61-year-old leader of the Indian Nationalists, was released from prison shortly after 11 o'clock.

Gandhi was taken out the back way secretly, bundled into a closed automobile with drawn curtains and driven to a small railway station about 10 miles from Poona, where the authorities put him on a train for Bombay. He was due to arrive there at 8:30 tomorrow morning.

The little old man wore only his tunal homespun loin cloth and a thin cotton shawl over his shoulders. He was thin and worn.

POETESS WITH HIM.

With him on the train was the woman Nationalist, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, India's leading poetess, who toured America in 1929.

None but a few persons, including the Associated Press correspondent, knew in advance the exact hour at which this midnight "flight" would take place.

All day and all night crowds in which there were many women waited outside the jail, hoping for a fleeting glimpse of the man who would lead India's 220,000,000 out of the shadow of British rule and into the full light of freedom. They dere disappointed.

OFFICIALS THANKED.

Gandhi's last act before leaving the prison where he has lived since last Mai was to hand Maj. J. R. Martin, the superintendent, a written statement in which, it was understood, he thanked him for his considerate treatment.

For the five-hour ride by train to Bombay he and Mrs. Naidu were given ordinary passenger quarters on a regular train and allowed four Hindu attendants.

Gandhi chatted pleasantly about his life in the prison and his plans for the future. He was particularly interested to know what America thought of him and how the American people regarded Ramsay MacDonald's declaration of Indian policy.

PROMISES STATEMENT

He was too weary and excited, he said, to give a formal interview, but he promised a statement when he reached Bombay.

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, president of the All India National Congress when the civil disobedience compaign for independence was launched, was released from prison at Allahabad today.

Mahadev Desai, secretary to Gandhi and one of the imprisoned members of the All India National Congress working committee, was released this morning from Sabrmati jail.

Out of 54,000 persons convicted in connection with the civil disobedience campaign between April and December, 23,503 are now in prison, Sir James Crerar told questioners in the Legislative Assembly at New Delhi today.

Chandra Bose, mayor of Calcutta, was arrested this afternoon as he led a procession of natives to Maidan for a meeting in connection with the independence day celebration. The parads was dispersed by police.

Doctor, 99, Tells How to Live to Be 109

Paris, Jan. 26 (INS)—Everything in moderation, is the first rule for the man who wants to live to be one hundred or more, says the French doctor, A. Guenlot, now 99.

"Sobriety is necessary," Dr. Guenlot advises, "but this does not mean that one cannot drink, smoke and otherwise amuse oneself. Wines are excellent for the health, and even strong alcoholic liquors may be taken, if not in excess, and never on an empty stomach.

"Tobacco is a pleasure, but, like all pleasures, cannot be abused."

The doctor, who was formerly president of the French Academy of Medicine, believes that fresh air and sunlight are indispensable for good health and a long life. Regular sleep and plenty of it is almost necessary. But one needs less as one grows older. Lots of exercise, mineral baths and massages play a big part.

It is foolish for a man to die at the age of 85, concludes Dr. Guenlot. All should live to be 100 at least, and it would not be unnatural to go on a couple of decades more. He even thinks that the human span should soon reach 120 if men are careful and moderate and do not worry.

ready to go on the stand were Patrolmen John Tobin and Perfer Fortin. All except Sergt. Timmins were members of Garrett's old headquarters' liquor squad.

"IN THE BAG" TALK

An "in-the-bag" discussion between Gallagher, Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle and Court Stenographer C. Harry Robbins amused spectators at the trial this morning.

It occurred when Doyle, after some search for a check exhibit, finally located it in Stenographer Robbins' bag.

"Let's not have anything in the bag," Gallagher remarked.

"It's all coming out of the bag," said the prosecutor.

"Mr. Doyle put it in the bag," Robbins interjected.

"What's that?" asked the assistant district attorney.

"Let us get along without this colloquy," interrupted Judge Patrick M. Keating.

Resuming the witness stand when the trial opened this morning, Turner was examined by Doyle, and gave new testimony that handwriting on bank deposit slips for accounts of Mrs. Garrett was the same as that on exhibits of the handwriting of the former raider.

SIGNATURES EXAMINED.

Turner was shown various deposit slips. One to the account of Florence H. Garrett in the Boulevard Trust Co., three to the account of Florence H. Reddin in the National Rockland Bank and 15 to the account of Florence H. Garrett in the First National Bank he said were, in his opinion, written by the same person who signed the name Oliver B. Garrett to an exhibit earlier introduced.

Thirteen to the account of Florence H. Garrett as trustee for Oliver B. Garrett in the First National Bank, he said, were so signed.

Turner was asked whether the person who wrote "D. J. Mulrenin" and then crossed it out on one slip on the National Rockland account also wrote "Oliver B. Garrett" on the exhibit. He said he would need more time to give an opinion, but said he thought the name Reddin on the same slip was written by the person who signed the exhibit.

SAYS HE'S EXPERT.

Under cross-examination he testified he had been 24 years in business, that criminal investigation was mainly his work, and that he was an expert on pistols, ballistics, typewriters and photographs.

He denied he was an expert on bloodstains and textiles but said he was a chemist and in that connection an expert on inks and paper.

"What else are you an expert on?" Callahan asked.

"That covers everything that I do very much of," said Turner.

"You're also an expert witness, aren't you?"

"I testify as such," was the reply. He said he had testified in more than 900 cases.

SOMETIMES MISTAKEN.

"Sometimes for the plaintiff and sometimes for the defendant in civil cases? Sometimes for the defendant, sometimes for the government in criminal cases?"

Turner admitted that was so.

"That depends upon who hires you first, doesn't it?" asked Gallagher.

"That has nothing whatsoever to do with it."

"In the course of your experience as an expert you have found out later that you have been mistaken?"

"Yes."

"And what you have been testifying to here is but your own opinion?"

"Yes."

"In another case you changed your opinion sometime later when you learned you were mistaken?"

"Yes," said Turner, "I asked for sufficient standards and did not receive them. But in this case I have many standards."

Callahan showed the witness six deposit slips for the National Rockland Bank account of Florence H. Reddin.

"Can you tell us what system was used in that writing?"

Turner said he could not, but that there was evidence of the Palmer and Spencerian systems.

EVIDENCE OF TWO SYSTEMS

"No, I have seen enough to form my conclusion."

Callahan handed Garrett a slip of paper. Doyle objected and was sustained by Judge Patrick M. Keating.

The cross-examiner picked up a group of deposit slips and asked if Turner, on Friday, had identified them as being in Garrett's handwriting.

"No, they are not here; the ones that I picked out," said the witness. He identified another group as being the ones.

Under cross-examination of Gallagher, Turner picked out six slips which he said he could tell, without apparatus, were written by Garrett's hand.

ANOTHER TILT

Forty minutes of the afternoon session were consumed by Gallagher and Turner in questions and answers regarding types of handwriting. Then followed another lively passage.

"Among other things, have you ever dipped into metaphysics?" Gallagher asked.

"No, I have trouble enough," said the witness.

"What do you mean by that?"

"Getting myself in trim so that I can take care of myself when you fellows get hold of me."

"Are you always prepared for an attck when you take the stand?" asked the defense attorney. Turner said he was.

"How do you feel now?"

"I feel fit," said Turner.

SWEDISH GIRL WINS PRINCE

Stockholm, Jan. 26 (AP)—One of the story book's most appealing tales, that of the pretty girl who marries a prince, appeared today about to come true in Sweden.

The principals in the romance are Prince Linnert, grandson of King Gustav and son of the monarch's second son, William, and Karin Nisswandt, daughter of a prominent industrialist of Stockholm of Dutch descent.

Court circles deny that stories of impending announcement of engagement of the two are correct, but the newspaper Degbiad says, apparently with some authority, that an official announcement will be made shortly.

Prince Linnert's mother is the Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna of Russia, whose marriage to Prince William was dissolved in 1914. She is now earning her living in New York department store. The Prince, her son, is 21 years old.

Prince Linnert has just finished his military service and has been engaged in farming in southern Sweden.

This assent will involve the Prince's renunciation of his rights to the throne.

INSURANCE AS AID TO IDLE TO BE STUDIED

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 26 (INS)—An exhaustive study of unemployment insurance as a means of combating future industrial depressions will be made by seven leading industrial States of the East as a result of a decision reached at the conference of governors at Albany, it was learned today.

The States which will participate are New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Ohio.

In deciding to conduct a thorough study of unemployment insurance, the Governors or their representatives from the Eastern States made it plain they had not committed themselves or their States to any attempt to put such a plan into effect, but that they believed it deserved careful study.

In addition to a study of unemployment insurance the Governors decided to send representatives of their industrial and labor departments to a conference shortly in Pennsylvania, where an effort will be made to make labor and corporate tax laws of the seven states more uniform.

M. D. C. ASKED TO TAKE PROPERTY

An appropriation of $20,000 for the Metropolitan District Commission to take over the land and buildings on Revere on the easterly side of Endicott ave. and between that avenue and Winthrop parkway, was urged by former Rep. Michael F. Shaw today at a hearing at the State House.

Shaw, speaking before the Legislative committee on Metropolitan Affairs, warned the committee that the buildings on the land are now endangered by high tides. There is danger he said that some of these buildings will collapse and come down on the boulevard.

Mayor Andrew Casassa opposed a suggestion from Rep. George Gilman of the committee that Revere and Winthrop condemn the structures. He contended that the State, in building the boulevard, created the hazard.

The War Memoirs of Marshal Foch

Ferdinand Foch commanded ten million men; ten times more than Grant; twenty times more than Napoleon. His grandfather fought under Bonaparte and his only son was one of the first to fall in the World War. His strategic ability and leadership won him the supreme command of all Allied armies fighting on French soil. Three weeks before the Germans came seeking an armistice he was ready with the conditions which he forced them to sign. Now you may read the true story of the great conflict by this man who smashed the Germans, gave the war-weary world the Armistice, led his victorious troops through the Arc de Triomphe, and retired quietly to his little villa to spend his last days and write these vivid memoirs.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

MARSHAL FOCH'S WAR MEMOIRS

HONOR AND SAFETY OF FRANCE IN BALANCE, SAID WARRIOR

After having commanded the Twentieth Corps during the early weeks of the war, at the preliminary Battle of Morhange in Lorraine, General Foch was summoned to Joffre's headquarters on August 28, 1914. He arrived just as the Commander-in-Chief was planning to turn upon the pursuing Germans and stop their hitherto victorious advance toward Paris.

Although astonished to learn how vast had been the Allies' retreat, Foch was relieved to find no confusion or panic around Joffre, who forthwith placed him in command of the army detachment, later called the Ninth Army of France. His chief of staff was Colonel Weygand, who was to remain with him through the war and is today head of the French military organization. Another aide was M. Tardieu, destined to be Premier of France.

The new Ninth Army was well organized by the time Joffre issued the famous order of September 5, launching what was to become known as the first Battle of the Marne, beginning September 6, 1914. Throughout the battle the Ninth Army played a valiant part. Foch's memoirs of this period are confined to a comparatively limited phase of the historic conflict; he is telling his own story, not writing a history of the entire war.

Just what the Ninth Army did he records in detail. Toward the end of his account it becomes evident that he is studying the wide problems of the war as a whole, as much as is possible from his restricted vantage-point as a commander of a single army. The Ninth Army's business is to hold back and then pursue the enemy in the terrain between the Fourth and Fifth French Armies.

On September 9, after three days of terrific combat against the Third German Army under General von Hausen, the Ninth finds the tide definitely turning in favor of the Allies. The enemy begins his precipitate retreat. Meanwhile Foch has received Joffre's historic orders to turn upon the enemy and issued some stirring orders to his own men.

Order Restored
Troops Reorganized Again

Our methodical retreat of the last few days had enabled us not only to elude the enemy's grasp, but also to tighten up discipline and re-infuse order in the ranks. The arrival of reinforcements had also made it possible to regroup and reorganize the reserve division, keeping them during this process removed from the excitement of the forward line.

Our front was now firmly and continuously established and contact with the Fifth and Fourth Armies on the left and right had been regained. The result was a considerable improvement in the tactical situation and this in its turn engendered a feeling of confidence.

The severity of the fighting, sleepless nights and exhausting marches intensified the inevitable depression that accompanies a retreat, and all ranks were in a state of serious fatigue. But it was already possible to predict that, with a few more days of rest and reorganization, the troops would be ready to face about and attack again with fair chances of success.

The hope, however, at one time entertained, of being able to resume a general offensive on or about September 2nd, had now been definitely abandoned.

Such was the situation when September opened.

The Commander-in-Chief, on September 1, issued the following instructions to army commanders:

"In spite of the tactical victories gained by the Third, Fourth and Fifth Armies on the Meuse and at Guise, the enemy's attempt to envelop the left flank of the Fifth Army is having been insufficiently blocked by the British and the Sixth Armies, makes it necessary for the Allied forces to effect a change of front, pivoting on their right.

"The whole of the Third, Fourth and Fifth Armies will renew the offensive as soon as the Fifth Army is freed from the danger of being outflanked.

"This movement may oblige the armies to continue falling back in a general north-south direction during some little time.

"The Fifth Army, on the marching wing, must, at any cost, prevent the enemy from outflanking it on its left. The other armies, not faced by a similar danger and less pressed in their movements, must seize every favorable occasion to halt, attack and delay the enemy."

The instructions then proceeded to define the limit that the retirement might attain, without in any way presupposing that such a limit would be reached. The limit indicated for the Fourth Army was the Rivers Ornain and Aube, in the region of Arcis-sur-Aube.

As can be seen, the Commander-in-Chief still thought it advisable, on September 1, to continue the retreat. We, of course, had only to comply with his views, profiting meanwhile by the breathing spell allowed us to further prepare our troops for the coming battle. During the next few days the retreat south continued without any interference on the part of the enemy.

Retreat Goes on Refugees Ordered Off the Roads

By the evening of September 3 the forces of the Army Detachment were in echelon between the Marne and the Vesle, with headquarters at Tours-sur-Marne. On the fourth the main body was on the general line of the Chalons-Bergeres-Etoges highway, with headquarters at Fere-Champenoise.

That morning, crowds of refugees which were being continually augmented by the inhabitants of the abandoned districts, had greatly impeded the movements of troops and supply trains. Passing through Vertus, about noon, I gave orders that, except between the hours of 3:00 p. m. and midnight, the refugees, on our line of march, were to be kept clear of the roads, so as to prevent any recurrence of this trouble and to ensure the movements of our trains.

On September 5, the normal services of supply, etc., appropriate to an army, were assigned to my detachment, thus enabling it to function independently of the Fourth Army, and my force was formally constituted into the Ninth Army.

The movements prescribed for the day of September 5 anticipated that the advance guards of the Ninth Army would reach the line Sommesous-Fere Champenoise-Semanne, but early in the morning of that day new instructions arrived from General Headquarters, which were to bring our retreat to an end:

"The time has come to take advantage of the hazardous situation in which the German First Army now finds itself and brings to bear upon it the concentrated efforts of the allied armies on our extreme left.

"The necessary dispositions will be taken during September 5 for launching an attack on the 6th. . . ."

Plans for Attack
Enemy Ready to Stake All

[After describing the tactical situation of the Ninth Army with a dangerous gap between its right and the hard-pressed Fourth Army, General Foch is informed on September 6 by General de Langle that it will be two days before this space can be partially filled by new reserves.]

Under these circumstances, I felt that the positions now held by the Ninth Army, however threatening the immediate outlook might be, must be maintained at all costs. The only way this could be accomplished was by the display of exceptional energy and activity on the part of every man, and I made a pressing appeal to my army, "to maintain and extend the successes it had already gained over an enemy who had suffered heavy losses and whose situation was now extremely hazardous."

As the battle might last several days, I gave instructions for the attacks to be carried out methodically: infantry was to be economized, artillery freely used and every foot of ground gained was to be at once organized for defense. These were the tactics prescribed for the commanders of all units.

The enemy, on his side, realized that his advance as a whole had been checked. His right wing being in difficulties on the Ourcq and his left definitely held up in Lorraine, he resolved to strike a decisive blow in the center.

This was his sole remaining chance of winning the victory on which he had counted, but whose probabilities had been so singularly diminished during the last forty-eight hours. For this final effort he intended to put in every man he had left in the region.

The main weight of his attack was to fall on the French Fourth and Ninth Armies. The plan was to put these armies definitely out of action, or, failing this, to force them apart and dash through the resulting gap. The execution of the plan, in what concerned the front of the Ninth Army, was to be effected by launching violent attacks east and west of the Saint-Gond Marshes, that is to say, in the very direction I had fixed for the attacks of my Forty-second Division and Eleventh Corps.

The fighting of September 7, 8 and 9 was destined to be furious on both sides, but it was to end in the defeat of the German forces.

[While Foch's record of the Ninth Army's supreme efforts in the Battle of the Marne deals largely with tactical moves on a small part of the front, he displays from the beginning the same qualities which four years later are to bring him to the command of all the Allied forces. He continuously urged his subordinates forward, regardless of difficulties and handicaps. To Foch there is no such thing as an army being too weary or too depleted to win victory.

On September 7 the Ninth is still fighting for its life, gaining ground here, losing ground there, but on the whole looking forward to success. Foch moves his troops rapidly, giving aid at weak points, telephoning for help to relieve his right wing, sending reserves to the center from his advancing left wing. Through September 8 and into the 9th the situation continues tense, but those two days mark the Germans' furthest advance against the Ninth Army.

Our Task Clear
Enemy Must Be Held at All Costs

The gallant resistance of the Moroccan Division during the 9th had been capital to the success of our armies. It had enabled the Forty-second Division to carry out that most delicate operation, a flank march in the face of the enemy and, when every movement counted, to arrive in the nick of time.

Again, if we had lost the high ground about Mondement, we could not have held the spur of Allemant.

This ground in the hands of the enemy would have opened up to him that portion of the plain of Champagne to which the Ninth Army had been clinging with every ounce of its energy during four long days.

Finally, this resistance on the part of the Moroccan Division was all the more precious in that the center and right of the Army had continued to give way under the enemy's heavy blows. In their violent, repeated and—so far—not very profitable attacks, the Germans must certainly have used up a large number of their troops; was it not likely that their absence would be felt at some other point of the front?

Reports from French General Headquarters were showing that our armies on the west were making notable progress. It was essential for the battle that the Ninth Army, then, should hold out, at no matter what cost until the advance made by our left wing became decisive.

The task of the Ninth Army was thus perfectly clear. However hard that task might prove, this army must detain the hostile forces on its front, prevent them from breaking through and stop them where they were until victory was assured.

I therefore once again called upon all ranks to put forth their best efforts and tried, by informing them of the enemy's situation along the rest of the battle front, to communicate to them my firm confidence in our ultimate success.

"Reports received at Ninth Army headquarters show that the German army, having been in movement without halt since the opening of the campaign, has reached the extreme limit of its endurance. In most of its units, officers no longer exist. Regiments are marching mixed together and general officers have lost control.

"Convinced as he was that he were incapable of offering him any further resistance, our vigorous offensive has taken the enemy by surprise.

"It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of taking advantage of this situation, and I ask each of you to draw upon that last spark of energy which in its moments of supreme trial has never been denied our race.

"The disorder in the enemy's ranks is the herald of our victory.

"If you fight on with undiminished spirit, you will stop him today, and tomorrow we shall begin to drive him out of our country.

"Remember that success comes to the side that holds out longest. The honor and safety of France are in the balance. One more effort and you are certain to win.

"Reports from the entire front, moreover, are good."

Meanwhile, the attacks against the center of the Ninth Army continued with redoubled intensity and our losses became heavier and heavier until finally the commander of the Ninth Corps had only one company left in reserve.

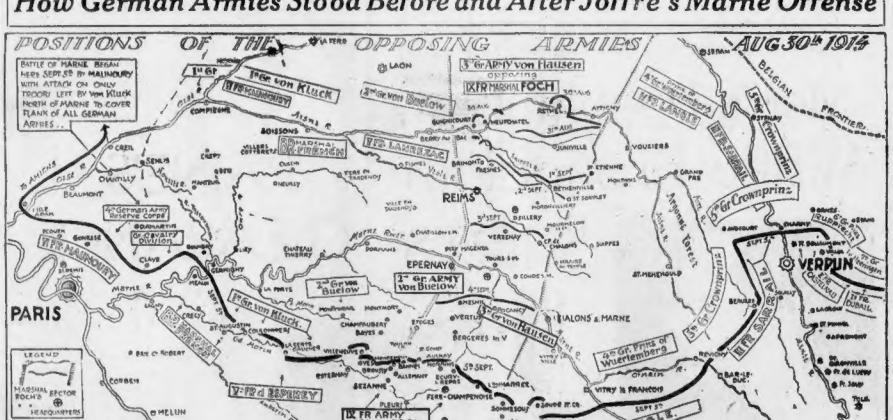
How German Armies Stood Before and After Joffre's Marne Offense



THIS MAP shows the position of the opposing armies when the first battle of the Marne, which brought Marshal Joffre world fame, began in September, 1914. It shows the successive retreat of the French and British armies before the onslaught of the Germans until the latter reached the farthest point of their advance on Paris, a few miles outside the French capital. It was at this point that Marshal Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French army, issued his famous order halting the retreat of the allied armies and launched a general attack against the invading armies. The attack was directed in particular against the exposed right flank of the German forces, commanded by Gen. Von Kluck, which had crossed the Marne in its headlong drive on Paris. The retreat of the Ninth French army, commanded by Marshal Foch, is especially indicated in the map.

MR. DONALD MURCHIE OF Milton, son of Mr. Guy Murchie, is having a "good-bye" party, skating, skiing and buffet supper, this evening in Dedham. He is leaving soon for the West where he is to be married.

"TOPAZE" OPENS TONIGHT at the Plymouth Theater under the auspices of the Professional Players. Tomorrow night is Infant's Hospital night and Mrs. William E. It is regretted that there will be but one more after "Topaze" four weeks hence. It is interesting to note that arriving on the Majestic tomorrow is the French company which has been playing Marcel Pagnol's "Topaze" in Paris for the past 18 months. They will present it in French on Broadway about the middle of February. Members of

Dandy Way to Make Hands Soft and White

Many women are afflicted with rough, red, or "houseworky" looking hands. An excellent way to make the hands soft, smooth, white and aristocratic-looking is to rub into the skin, after each washing, a few drops of a mixture of sea moss and glycerin. Sea moss is a wonderful skin whitener and softener and glycerin a splendid balm. In combination, the two make a remarkable lotion. You can buy this lotion already prepared at any first-class drug or department store. It is called Nepto Lotion and costs only 50c a bottle.

Nepto Lotion makes dry, rough or red hands soft, supple and white. May be used on the face or any other part of the body with as great benefit as on the hands. Wherever it is used, it whitens, smoothens and refreshes! Also relieves and prevents chapping, chafing, sunburn and windburn. Rub a few drops into your skin before going out and it will protect the skin from the withering effect of sun and wind. Nepto Lotion is a naturally good thing for the skin and can do no harm whatever. Contains no grease to clog the pores and catch the dirt. Rubs in dry and smooth so you can powder over it. Economical to use, too, as a little goes a long way.

Shaw Takes Bride This Week

Florence Henry Mitchell to Wed Boston Man in Philadelphia Ceremony

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, Jan. 26 (US)—On Wednesday, next, Mrs. Henry F. Michell will be in a position to fold her carefully manicured digits and prepare to rest on her laurels.

For, so far as her two daughters are concerned, Mrs. Michell's work will come to an end when Louis Agassis Shaw of Boston places a wedding ring on the fourth finger of Florence Henry Michell's left hand.

The wedding is set for noon on Wednesday at the Michell town house on Chestnut st., in West Philadelphia and, due to the fact that Mrs. Michell (for some unknown reason) has decided Florence shall have a small, simple hymeneal event, the ultra-fashionables whose names have been added to the Michell invitation lists in the decade that has passed since Mr. and Mrs. Michell stumbled into Newport—and social fame—will be among the missing at the ceremony and small reception scheduled to follow.

INTERESTING CHAPTER

The Cinderella-like tale of how the Michells first tempted the Mayfair fates at Newport and how they succeeded in carving out a niche for themselves in the exclusive Bellevue ave., forms one of the interesting chapters of the after-war history of New York-Newport society.

The social bee buzzed loudly in Mrs. Michell's bonnet and, to her credit, let it be said she accomplished, without the aid of great wealth or a long line of ancestors, what many other mothers have attempted to do—and failed.

Mrs. Michell married her other daughter, Helen Michell, to Allen Weiler Morton, following the passing of "Ollie" B. Hartman, to whom Helen had been previously engaged, and on Wednesday the remaining Michell daughter, Florence, is to enter the smartest ranks of Boston's Back Bay society.

My topper is off in a salute to Mrs. Michell. She is in a class with the late Richard T. Wilson and Mrs. William H. Force.

PAYNE GIRL TO WED

Announcement is made this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Payne of this city of the engagement of their daughter, Vivian Aileen Payne, to R. Alexa Watson, a native of the Bowery State, and son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Watson of Auburn, Me.

The future Mrs. Watson was graduated from Drew Seminary, Carmel, N. Y., and Mr. Watson from Purdue University.

According to present plans, the wedding bells will peal out on Feb. 7 in the [illegible] morning at Frederic I. out in Auburn.

Chic Informals Proper at Palm Beach

WHERE DOES one wear frocks like that?" Alas! where—unless one is fortunate enough to holiday in the South? The parlors of one's friends, the lobbies of grand hotels do not furnish the background for the gay, informal frocks glorifying shop windows now that sunny resort places do. One wears them when promenading in green places, when taking tea under palms, when dancing in twilight—if one is lucky!

THE GARDEN party variety of dresses and the dinner dresses that stress the picturesque in full skirts and brief sleeves have their happiest background at Palm Beach—where, this season, femininity is having a big play.

STRIPES ARE smartly worn at the resorts, and promise to be in high favor for spring. The delightful resort frock pictured is of summer silk "candy striped" white and vivid red, an exceedingly chic combination.

THE STRIPES run horizontally, while inserted sections of vertical stripes caught by groups of tucks form the trimming each side front of skirt and the short sleeves. The fichulike neckline is caught with bow of narrow red grosgrain ribbon at center front, and is repeated in sash at back of waist. The small hat is of white straw, tucked and folded to tiny bow at top. A necklace of large pearls is worn and the bracelet is red composition. The pumps are of white linen, and perforated brown calf, with built-up leather heel.

SHOES THAT vacation in the South this winter have all taken a definite step forward preserving a cool attitude toward fashion. Cut out effects, perforations and even loosely woven materials give a new ventilation to the smartest feet. As for color—let there be light! White is the first footwear color with all the most delicate pastels stepping right along.

IMAGINE A sports shoe in white calf that has a section of hand-crochet extending from the heel to the vamp! Could anything be more comfortable or airy? Then there are oxfords with three tops made of pink eyelet embroidered linen. And evening shoes that are reduced to twin decorative straps that hold the foot to the heel.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashions generally. Address your questions to The Boston Evening American or to Station WLEX.

Women Urge Juvenile Bureau

Massachusetts Civic League Sponsors Meeting for Discussion of Plan

BY NANCY BREWSTER

The establishment of a juvenile crime prevention bureau as a precautionary measure against juvenile delinquency is the aim of a group of women, who tomorrow will present as the principal speaker at a luncheon-meeting an exponent of that idea, Miss Virginia Murray of New York city.

Under the auspices of the Massachusetts Civic League, the committee whose special work is juvenile crime prevention, has arranged the meeting tomorrow at the Twentieth Century Club, 2 Joy st., bringing to the city the speaker who has been executive secretary of the Travelers' Aid Society in New York for 12 years.

SPONSORED BY LEAGUE

The meeting is sponsored by this league committee also as a means of securing the appointment of more women in the enforcement and administration of the law. Mrs. S. Sheldon Glueck, who with her husband, recently published a book revealing the findings of their crime survey, is chairman of this committee and also a member of the Harvard Crime Survey. She is to preside.

It is the belief of Miss Murray that while policemen and policewomen are law enforcing officers, they should also be social workers with police power.

HULTMAN TO ATTEND

"Their most useful and constructive work can and should be done among juveniles and along protective and preventive lines rather than in rigid law enforcement," Miss Murray maintains.

At this luncheon, as guests, will be Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman; Commission.r Richard B. Conant, the chiefs of police from Lowell, Quincy, Lynn, Cambridge, Springfield, Worcester, Fall River; many probation officers from nearby towns, representatives from women's clubs and Miss L. C. Caldwell, state policewoman.

Republican Club Calendar Offers Interesting Talks

A full, as well as an interesting, week is in store for members of the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts.

Rev. Carroll Perry, who recently lectured at the Boston Public Library, will address club members tomorrow afternoon at the club house, at 2:30, on "The Handwriting of Christopher Columbus." Mrs. Alexander Lincoln, director of the activities department, has planned the program.

For Wednesday night, an all Russian program has been arranged by the director of the political department, Mrs. Frederick E. Judd. The meeting is scheduled for 8 o'clock at the clubhouse, with Miss Margaret McGill, a member of the board of governors as hostess.

First on the speaking program will be Professor Pitirim Sorokin, of Harvard University, who will discuss the "Present Day Economic Situation and Policy of the Soviet Government." Professor Michael Karpovitch, also of Harvard, will talk on "Why We Russians Oppose Bolshevism"; Mme. I. C. Toumanoff, wife of Prince Leo K. Toumanoff, president of the Russian Club of Boston, on "Some Russian Adventures" and Christian Hertier familias with Russian problems, who will talk on some phase of the question.

The Thursday morning political lecture will this week be given at 11 o'clock by Mrs. Delia Akeley, woman explorer and big game hunter. She will be introduced by Mrs. Judd.

The week closes next Saturday with a resume of the "News of the Week," discussed by Mrs. A. J. George at the clubhouse, at 2:30 p. m., under the auspices of the activities department.

Ladies' Unity Club to Hold Charity Bridge and Whist

For the benefit of the Home for Aged People, 44 Bartlett st., Roxbury, which institution the Ladies' Unity Club supports and maintains, the membership will conduct a bridge party Wednesday afternoon at the Hotel Statler, Salle Moderne, at 2 o'clock.

An enlarged committee headed by the president, Mrs. Ethel Rogers Limbach, is directing the arrangements. Of the various tables and committees, these chairmen are in charge: Ways and means, Mrs. Frank Rogers; social activities, Mrs. Benjamin J. Blakney; Anna F. Osgood Clyde, Mrs. Emil W. Gobrecht; visiting committee, Mrs. Arthur H. Kellon; cards and pencils, Mrs. Charles F. Fillansbee; candy table, Mrs. E. P. Dodge and Mrs. Avard H. Nichols.

Textile Exhibit to Illustrate Home Center Talk

To illustrate the principles of his lectures, Donald Smith Feeley has arranged an exhibit of decorative textiles at the Boston Home Information Center, an exhibit open to the public all this week.

Musical Program to Feature Meeting of Prelude Club

An interesting program, under the direction of Mrs. Mary G. Reed, will be offered at the meeting of the Prelude Club tomorrow morning, at 11 o'clock, in the Copley Plaza Hotel. Assisting artists include Elizabeth Schultz, pianist; Rose Bryant Hamlin, soprano; Annette Travers, 'cellist; Mabel Bennett, accompanist, and John Lyons, tenor.

Arrangements are now being made for a bridge-musicale and tea at the League House, 1 Arlington st., Wednesday Feb. 4, at 2 p. m., for which Miss Eileen Doherty and Mrs. Mildred Merrill are chairmen. Mrs. Kenneth B. Hiscoe is chairman of the tea, and Mrs. Lewis J. Hewitt, chairman of tickets.

Delicious Shredded Wheat Pudding

ROLL SHREDDED wheat and mix with butter.

ADD DRY ingredients, fruit and spices and mix well.

Whole Wheat Recipe Wins Prize

Today's $5 goes to Mrs. C. A. Eshen, Summer ave., Reading, for her delicious Shredded Wheat Steamed Fruit Pudding. And before I give you the recipe I want to say just a word or two about this good old friend of ours—shredded wheat.

There probably isn't a breakfast table in the land that is not familiar with this crispy, brown breakfast food, but with the inventiveness of the true cook, many ladies, like Mrs. Eshen, saw in the shredded wheat biscuit the foundation for other dishes besides the savory little biscuit so popular in the morning.

Shredded wheat, as you know, is made of whole wheat that is so good for all 'round healthfulness, and can be used to make so many good things—such as shredded wheat porridge, shredded wheat bread, cookies and muffins.

But just now I mustn't forget you want Mrs. Eshen's recipe for Shredded Wheat Steamed Fruit Pudding

2 cups rolled shredded wheat
1 cup Cresota flour
½ tsp. Rumford baking powder
½ cup butter
1 cup washed and chopped raisins
2 apples chopped with the raisins
¼ tsp. Worcester salt
½ tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg
½ cup Grandma's molasses
1 scant tsp. soda
2 cups sweet milk

Put the water on to boil before beginning the pudding. Then butter the mold. Mix the butter and rolled shredded wheat together. Add flour in which the baking powder has been mixed, then the salt, cinnamon, nutmeg, and chopped fruit. Next, add the soda to the molasses, stir till foamy. Add to the mixture. Mix and add the two cups of milk, stir it in well, pour into the buttered mold, cover and steam three hours. Serve with hard sauce.

Here's Some Tips to Lessen Your Wash Day Troubles

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday morning broadcast over Station WLEX

ANOTHER WASH day has rolled around and in the great majority of homes I'm thankful to say that it no longer means that mother spends the evening on the sofa nursing a back ache and that father is grouchy. In the old days supper on "Blue Monday"—usually meant cold leftover meat from the Sunday roast and some hastily fried potatoes.

Today statistics tell us that there are 3,000,000 washing machines in use in this country and more than 7000 power-driven laundries doing a flourishing business. When it is all possible, the modern housewife is glad to take advantage of these modern helps and strength-savers. But few of us are brave enough to send our precious expensive linens and dainty dresses and overgarments.

USE SPECIAL STARCH

These we keep for our own personal care, knowing that it is not the original cost of the article, but the care of them that counts. It is a real joy to rinse out our favorite linens and undies in quick dissolving soap granules and then giving them a brand new gloss and finish with the special starch that comes in the blue and white box.

Not only will this starch restore linens to their pristine beauty, but it will make cotton materials look like linen; even crash, Indian head and mercerized materials, as well as restoring that precious "new look" to children's clothes and dainty house dresses.

I really can't praise this starch too highly. Of course, the finer garments and pure linens need only a trace of it, but the heavier materials and mercerized fabrics will take more and all of them will have the finish that we used to think could only be given at a professional laundry.

TO REMOVE STAINS

The white articles are soaked in tepid water containing a good solution of the soap granules, but colored linen should not be soaked. The linen is soused up and down in the water, rubbing only those parts which are especially stained or soiled. Then rinse in several waters until the final one is clear, using a little bluing in the last water. Wring then starch with the special starch we are partial to here in the Martha Lee School, using only the amount necessary to restore the original texture of the material. Wring again, pull into shape, being careful not to stretch the corners, and dry. Iron while still slightly damp. If you want to retint the materials, add a small amount of tintex to the starch solution.

For fruit, coffee, punch stains, etc., stretch the spotted portion tightly over a bowl, fastening with a rubber band, and pour rapidly boiling water through, from a kettle held a foot and a half above it.

For chocolate strains, follow the same procedure, but first moisten with cold water and borax. For blood stains, use soap and cold water; for ink, use lemon rust, and for lactic acid diluted with an equal amount of cold water; put on with a medicine dropper, rinse, repeat, rinse again, and wash.

SPRINKLE EVENLY

Cream stains, or any grease stains should be removed as soon as possible. If sponging with soap and water is not effective, try washing in baking soda solution or use a cleaning fluid.

Stains in cloth which has been starched well usually come out more quickly than in unstarched materials; and the boiling water method is usually satisfactory, for it dissolves the starch and the stain comes with it.

Before ironing, sprinkle evenly (use a clean whisk broom if you do not own a sprinkler). Ease in ironing fabrics largely in smooth rolling. After sprinkling, wrap linen in cloths and let stand several hours. Iron with the warp, not round and round, until thoroughly dry. Crease as little as possible store smaller cloths and runners on cardboard rollers. Learn to iron with both hands.

Any special laundry problems that trouble you? I'll gladly help if I can.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

BERT WHEELER AND ROBERT WOOLSEY REUNITED BY RADIO PICTURES

WILL STAR IN TWO FILMS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 26—Extra Special! Extra Special! Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are to be reunited. The fans throughout the country registered such violent protest against these two funsters going their separate ways that William Le Baron engaged Ralph Spence to write two stories for them.

I wondered at the time why Radio Pictures thought it necessary to break up this team which had functioned successfully in spite of the fact that after a time most teams grow woefully stale.

Louella O. Parsons

Here's another little announcement that comes from William Le Baron. Radio Pictures will make 36 features and 20 shorts. Sixteen of these features will be supers and 20 will be program numbers and here's still another little item.

Richard Dix will play in super features only. I suspect I will have to say "I'm sorry but I was wrong" about "Cimarron" because Richard Dix gives the performance of a lifetime and this writer for one couldn't see him in the part. Shows how we can make mistakes in casting pictures for other people.

THE IMPORTANCE of character actors is at last recognized. Take Jean Hersholt, Lewis Stone, Noah Beery and a dozen others who are as much sought after as any juvenile favorites. Jean Hersholt has just been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. What with all the signing going on in film circles, Irving Thalberg and Louis B. Mayer decided, after seeing the rushes of "Daybreak," that Jean Hersholt should stay right on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Noah Beery is still free-lancing. He plays the heavy in "The Ruling Passion," George Arliss' picture. One thing about Noah Beery, he can be the most despicable villain in the world and yet one never has the feeling he is being melodramatic

ARRIVING TODAY in our town is Robert Milton. Milton packed his bag and baggage, forgot his stage plans and hurried westward in answer to a call from Warner Brothers to "Come You and I." Arrangements and even a new long term contract were all made by telegraph by Sam Wohls and Mr. Milton. The answer to this sudden call is Alfred Green's serious illness. Mr. Green was unable to continue with "You and I," and because of Robert Milton's outstanding work in "Outward Bound," he was immediately summoned to Hollywood.

SNAPSHOOTS OF Hollywood collected at random: The film folk in training to attend the Film Welfare League luncheon given by MRS. TOM MIRANADA at the Roosevelt Hotel this noon. MARION DAVIES hurrying from M.G.M studio just in time to see "Tarzan Horn." LOUIS B. MAYER and IRVING THALBERG taking bows for this year's picture adventure. BENNIE HYMAN entertaining the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer crowd with some other friends at the Embassy Club. KATHRYN and ADOLPHE MENJOU dividing their time between the HYMAN party and the opening of the Montmartre. The old Montmartre putting on a gala appearance. CONSTANCE TALMADGE NETCHER wearing a black evening dress and NATALIE TALMADGE KEATON in white, the center of a happy party at the Montmartre. MRS. MENJOU wearing pale blue and BEBE DANIELS in white at the Montmartre. SALLY BLAINE with GRANT WITHERS and LORETTA YOUNG, at the same place. W. S. VAN DYKE entertaining friends at the Montmartre. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Actor Goes Looney 1000 Times in Eerie Play

If one wants to know how it feels to play the same role in a play 1000 times, just ask Edward Forbes, who has been doing just that with the part of Renfield, the lunatic in "Dracula," which is now at the Lyric. Forbes, who created the part with the O. E. Wee production of "Dracula," says that only a man who has studied to be a singer could possibly stand the terrific strain on the vocal chords that he subjects his to with the spine-creeping laugh he uses 25 times each night.

Isa Kremer

Isa Kremer, noted singer of ballads and folk songs in many tongues and from many lands, will give a concert at Jordan Hall next Wednesday evening for the benefit of the pioneer workers in Palestine. Nicholai Kassman, violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will share the program.

Makes a Small Part Big

JOHN DALY MURPHY

HE MAY BE only a window washer in "June Moon" at the Wilbur, but John Daly Murphy proves he is a corking good actor by making his small role an important one. Staff Artist Charles Schmidt sketched him doing his stuff.

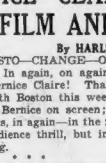
BERNICE CLAIRE SCORES IN FILM AND ON STAGE

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

PRESTO—CHANGE—O! Hi-Spy, as the children have it at play. In again, on again, gone again—only to come back again, Bernice Claire! That's about the way it goes at the RKO Keith Boston this week; eyes open, and you behold the beautiful Bernice on screen; close them, and there she is, in person, again—in the flesh! Not unique, to get this sort of an audience thrill, but infrequent enough to make it very interesting.

* * *

MISS CLAIRE is doubly the high spot of the Keith-Boston's RKO anniversary program. For she is not only the star of the feature film, "Kiss Me Again," but she is also the vaudeville headliner. Naturally enough, the management asked this a Victor Herbert festival week, because that eminent composer turned out "Mlle. Modiste" years ago. In this operetta is that haunting waltz tune which gives the latest screen version of the Herbert work its new title. So RKO, the composer and Mlle. Bernice, a shining daughter of the Sunkist State, share in the jubilee, while the management is rejoicing at the big business the special show is doing at the box office.



Bernice Claire

Possessed of a good voice, the star does her flesh-and-blood act with exceeding charm and talent. She sings in manner most pleasing, some of the better known Herbert airs, and varies her offering with other composers' pieces, while the audience warms heartily to her, and accords her its loud plaudits.

THE FILM is superbly produced and Miss Claire adds to her laurels. Undoubtedly the women fans will glus their eyes to these gowns which are on display time and again; it is like being in on a fashion show. The Herbert music is so good it loses nothing of its quality and appeal, and it must be said that the prima donna sings her role well. She has good support, notably from Edward Everett Horton and Walter Bidgeon.

THE VAUDEVILLE bill is entertaining throughout. It includes Richy Craig, Jr., Ed and Tom Hickey and Revel Bros. and "Red." This week's show will conclude RKO's second anniversary celebration.

RAIL STORY ON TWO SCREENS

"Other Men's Women," now at the Modern and Beacon, is a story of elemental passion, sacrifice and devotion. Its background is a smoke-shrouded region of thundering trains, crunching bridges and swirling waters, not to forget the rose-covered cottage where Jack (Grant Withers), the engineer, lives happily with Lily (Mary Astor), his pretty wife. Devoted to each other, they share affections for Bill (Regis Toomey), the fireman. It is when the liking between Lily and Bill turns to love that the pastoral scene changes.

Mary Astor

On the same program is "Jaws of Hell," a narrative of the "Charge of the Light Brigade" familiar to everyone through Tennyson's undying verses.

Zimbalist

Efrem Zimbalist violinist, plays at the fourth of the Statler Morning Musicales for the benefit of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy. Concertos by Mozart in A major and Huhay in G minor are the principal items on the program. Shorter numbers by Cavelli, Spohr, Powell, Achron, Schubert and a fantasy by the violinist himself round out the list.

PIANIST WINS OVATION AT CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH

As a sort of last gasp before the operatic deluge which hits Boston this evening, there were three concerts running simultaneously yesterday afternoon, a celebrated pianist, a chamber orchestra producing a program of daring novelties, and a symphony orchestra in a program refreshingly free from routine.

First to the celebrity—our old friend, Sergei Rachmaninoff, playing for an audience that did not crowd Symphony Hall, but which gave him, during the course of the program, the warmest, most sincere (evidently) applause bestowed on any artist during the past year. Mr. Rachmaninoff played the Schubert-Tausig Andantino and Variations, the Schumann Davidsbundlertanze, the Chopin Scherzi in B minor and E-flat minor, a Prelude and Etude Tableau of his own, and three compositions by Liszt.

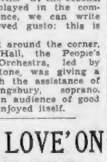
Here was a typical Rachmaninoff program, conservatively leaning to the 19th century, with a dash of his own music to heighten, rather than disturb, the impression.

But across the street, at the Repertory Theater, was beckoning the Chamber Orchestra of Boston, led by Nicholas Slonimsky, champion of modern music. His program this afternoon included four pieces performed for the first time in Boston. We managed to hear "Bembe," a group of rhythmic sketches by the Cuban, Alejandro Caturla, and Paul Allen's "Montezuma." Of the first, hard "music" to play and terrible to listen to, we could make little. Of the second, which was played in the composer's presence, we can write with unreserved gusto: this is bad music.

Finally, just around the corner, at Jordan Hall, the People's Symphony Orchestra, led by Thompson Stone, was giving a program with the assistance of Marion Kingsbury, soprano. There was an audience of good size, which enjoyed itself.

'FREE LOVE' ON PARK BILL

The Park has another triple program for the week. The top feature is "Free Love," with Genevieve Tobin and Conrad Nagel, supported by Sallie Pitts, Monroe Owsley, and Slim Summerville.



Conrad Nagel

"Free Love" is a story of the happiness and heartaches of marriages. Based on the stage play, "Half Gods," by Sidney Howard.

Of almost equal importance, "Sheer Luck," with Nick Stuart, Jobyna Ralston, Bobby Vernon, Phil McCullough, Margaret Landis, John Ince and Reed Howes. The picture ambles along through dance sequences, love scenes, binding and gagging, kidnaping and auto chases, and ends in a prohibition raid.

The third feature is Chapter 5 of Universal's serial, "The Spell of the Circus," this chapter being under the title of "The Leap for Life."

New Song Featured on Program at Benefit

The new song written and composed by Miss Agnes Carr and Mickie Alpert, named "Dear Little Boy Blue State Girl of Mine," is sung by Billy Payne at the meeting of the Ladies' Helping Hand Auxiliary to the Home for Jewish Children, this afternoon at the Temple Mishkan Tefila schoolhouse, Elm Hill ave., Roxbury. Joseph Solomon will be at the piano. Miss Carr is a well known newspaper woman. On the same program Prof. Robert E. Rogers will deliver a talk on "The Forgotten Child."

Greek Star

MME. COTOPOULI

THE FAMOUS Greek drama "Elektra," is to be given at Symphony Hall tomorrow night.

IZAAK WALTON HIS MODEL

For an operatic tenor, Joseph Lertora, who plays a leading role in "A Wonderful Night," at the Shubert, goes in for his pleasures in a really "he-man" manner.

Mr. Lertora is a real fisherman. He has specialized in deep-sea fishing with an eye keen on the striped bass. The real sport of deep-sea fishing is in the pursuit and catching of the game tuna and equally game swordfish, he says.

Mr. Lertora is half owner of a fishing smack. The boat is a 75-footer, equipped with usual complement of sail and also with a Diesel engine and carries all the rigging and gear for swordfishing. Zane Grey, the famous novelist, has accompanied Mr. Lertora on several trips.

Mr. Lertora was born in New York. His family has no stage or musical history, Joseph being the only one to manifest any considerable musical or dramatic talent. His father is a candy manufacturer.

STAR'S HOBBY LANGUAGES

Edward G. Robinson, whose name, despite his resolution to lose himself in a great variety of different kinds of roles, has become a synonym for stage and screen gangsters, in real life is small, lively, genial and decidedly foreign-looking. Besides that, he is a very fine artist, his latest gangster role is the title part in "Little Caesar," now at RKO Keith's.

Robinson is a Rumanian by birth, and is a college man whose chief hobby has been the acquisition of many languages and much strange lore. He is a thorough master of seven languages and has a speaking, writing and reading acquaintance with several more.

WORLD NEWS IN HEARST FILMS

The current issues of Hearst Metrotone News, showing at Loew's State and Orpheum, present a most interesting resume of world events.

The prohibition situation is given the feature position in the State lineup, with the presentation of George W. Wickersham in a brief summary of the findings of the now famous commission named after him. Applause from the crowded auditorium greeted the next item—that of the German people welcoming the back beer season.

Other subjects included a kindly hunter feeding snowbound deer in the Adirondacks; H. E. Mann lifting an 800-pound bull for exercise; the world's ski stars competing for the national title in a blizzard at Carey, Ill., and the new geographical fees of Niagara Falls after the terrific cave-in on the American side.

At the Orpheum, Ed Dudley, famous golf pro, is shown defeating famous rivals at Los Angeles; French folk reviving dances and quaint music of other years; Lindbergh being presented the French Legion of Honor Cross by Ambassador Claudel at Washington; an enthusiastic group of skaters being propelled by sails at a terrific rate of speed over the ice, and finally, the opening event of the winter horse racing season at Miami.

COAST GUARD STORY FILMED

"Men on Call," on screen at the Fenway and Scollay, is a dramatisation of stern realities faced by the Coast Guard in their constant vigil to safeguard the coasts, featuring Edmund Lowe, Mae Clarke and William Harrigan. John Blystone directed the story, which deals with two men of the service, who, fate decrees, should fall in love with the same girl. One man knew her before he joined. The other, his captain, befriended him, made his life easier in the service, then helped him rescue the girl from attempted suicide, without ever realizing who she was.

Edmund Lowe

"Men on Call" was filmed almost entirely out-of-doors, along the coast of Northern California.

Concert by Boston Symphony Tonight

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give the third concert of the Monday evening series in Symphony Hall tonight. Dr. Serge Koussevitsky will devote the first part of the program to the music of Mozart, the 175th anniversary of whose birth falls in this month. The Master's Symphony in G minor will then be played, and his Pianoforte Concerto in D minor (K. No. 466). The soloist of the occasion will be Horiena Monath.

TREASURERS OF THEATERS ELECT

The Theater Treasurers' Club of Boston, composed of the genial young men who preside over the box offices of the city's principal temples of dramatic art and the flickering cinema, went into the annual huddle yesterday and elected new officers. This business done, the proceedings just naturally drifted into refreshment and entertainment at the Bradford—of which there was considerable. Among the guests at the late evening celebration were Harry Nelmes and Lew Wood of New York, each of whom is an active worker of the National Association of Theater Treasurers.

E. A. Grenier

At the annual meeting, held in the afternoon, the following officers were elected in a re-elected ticket: Ernest A. Grenier, president; Frank D. Orvitt, vice-president; Hugo W. J. Lundgren, treasurer; Abraham Koplen, financial secretary, and Thomas E. Roche, recording secretary. The new directors are William E. Landrigan, Paul Spillane, Thomas J. Waters and Arthur G. Manley.

During and following the dinner at the Bradford, spirited entertainment was provided by volunteer talent from the several vaudeville and picture theaters and the night clubs of the city.

Rudy Vallee will appear on stage at the Met on the following schedule today: P. M., 12:38, 2:53, 5:07, 7:21, 9:35.

FANNING with GEORGE UNDERWOOD

THE TWO JACKS. THEIR FIRST AND LAST MEETINGS

JACK DEMPSEY and Jack Sharkey "met" once again over the telephone last Saturday. It recalls to mind one of the first meetings between the old Manassa Mauler and the Garrulous Gob. It was in the Madison Square Garden gymnasium, where Sharkey was training for his go with the old Man Killer. Sharkey's handlers had connived a scheme wherein their man was to get the "psychological jump" on Dempsey. It worked—with reverse English.

"When Dempsey shows up," Sharkey was instructed, "give him the hypnotic glare. Put everything you have in the handshake. Rough him up a bit and tell him you are going to knock him for a loop. Let him know you're boss."

The Garrulous Gob watched the door wherein Dempsey was to enter, tensed and on edge for the "psychological test."

But the old Manassa Mauler came up the back stairs from Rickard's office and entered the gym from a rear door. Espying Sharkey's broad back Dempsey walked quickly up to the sailorman, grasped one hand, placed the other affectionately on Sharkey's shoulder and said:

"Hullo, Jack, Old Man, how are you? And how are the good wife and the little kiddies?"

"Eh, fine, Mister Dempsey, oh, fine," stammered the surprised Sharkey, completely disarmed by Dempsey's greeting, or else forgetting his role. "The wife and kids are all right."

"That's good, Jack, good," went on Dempsey. "I'm so glad to hear it. When the family is all right a feller can't help being all right, can he? Give my kind regards to Mrs. Sharkey and the children."

Watching Sharkey closely one saw him "wilt." Dempsey's "slack" completely had "disarmed" him. Instead of a meeting between a cocky challenger and a slipping champion it was a meeting between the champion, old and a green, fidgety, somewhat awed challenger. The psychological jump Sharkey had hoped to obtain was stolen by the old Man Killer.

SPORT BRIEFS IN NUTSHELLS

A SIGNED contract with the Yankees has kept Joe Sewell from heading down the trail to the barren lands of baseball. Joe is one of baseball's standbys. Among other things he played 1100 consecutive games for Cleveland. In the long stretch with the Indians he averaged only nine strikeouts per season, despite he faced the greatest pitchers of the game.

Headlines clarioning results of skating and skiing events all over the country but none for meets in Boston or vicinity. Why is it Boston should be the home of winter sport and breed whole flocks of speed skaters.

The new Braves outfield certainly is Heavy Artillery. But look at Brooklyn with Babe Herman, Fatty O'Doul and Johnny Frederick, Pittsburgh with the Waner brothers and Comorosky, and the Cubs

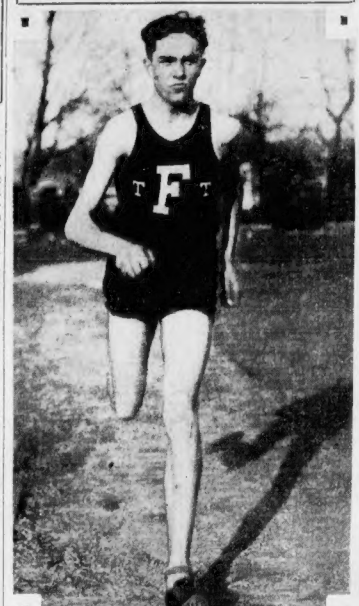
COMING TO BOSTON



JOE McCLUSKEY of Fordham, who defeated Leo Lermond of the B. A. A. in New York a few weeks ago in a two-mile race, again will race Lermond on Saturday night at the Boston Garden in the Leo Larrivee two-mile run of the Prout games.

M'CLUSKEY IN PROUT GAMES 2-MILE RACE

By BILL CONNELL

Joe McCluskey of Fordham will match strides with Leo Lermond and other distance run notables of the nation next Saturday night in the Leo Larrivee two-mile race at the William C. Prout track games in the Boston Garden.

The slim, black haired young man from Fordham will be after his third victory over Lermond in this track season. McCluskey defeated Lermond in the two-mile races at the Brooklyn K. of C. meet some weeks ago, and repeated when he led Lermond home in the 3500 meters race of the Brooklyn college games on Saturday night.

McCluskey was second to Gus Moore Saturday, yet the Fordham flyer edged Lermond, who was third.

Lawson Robertson, famous U. of Penn track coach, and others have said McCluskey is one of the best prospects of the U. S. for the 3500 meters of the coming Olympic games. If the Fordham distance ace defeats Lermond on Saturday, track fans will begin to credit such statements.

Lermond Anxious to Win in Boston

Lermond is billed to start in his third race of the season, a two mile affair, on Wednesday night at the Newark A. C. games. That race, with the two already gone through, should have the effect of racing Leo back into his real form.

Lerm and himself is very anxious to win Saturday, when he runs for an audience of homs fans for the first time in two years. So he will give everything, in the hope of winning the Larrivee trophy.

One thing has handicapped Lermond considerably in his first two races, which also hindered him on Wednesday night. That is running in flat shoes. Leo in training uses spikes, and he dislikes more than most runners the change to "flats."

But in the Prout games Lermond will wear spikes, and this seemingly minor change may make a world of difference in his running.

Lermond and McCluskey hold the lion's share of publicity in the two-mile race, yet Billy Zepp of the Dorchester club, a fine runner, will face the other pair. Zepp is national A. A. U. 10-mile and cross country champion. A splendid runner over the longer routes, Zepp of late has been improving in his short distance racing and may score an upset by winning this two-mile run.

Dr. D. Murphy of Harvard is in the two-mile race. Murphy was the Harvard-Yale cross country run this year. If Murphy is as good as his coach thinks, the Crimson may have a victory to its credit at the Prout games.

The remainder of the field will be announced later in the week.

Another one-mile relay has been lined up for the meet between Rhode Island State and Colby.

JESS WILLARD PINS K. O. ON BOXING GAME

Glendale, Cal., Jan. 26 (U.S.)—For a champion, the fight game offers comforts that are unmatched in any "racket."

The sport itself is a clean, healthful, manly form of recreation. But greedy, selfish, unprincipled and "racketeering" managers have given it an atmosphere which provides innumerable pitfalls for the American youth.

It is the harsh dealing, the hard-boiled methods and the unscrupulous actions of these managers that prompt Jess Willard, former heavyweight champion of the world, to give this indictment of the game which proved so handsome a financial reward to him before and after he held the title.

"The passing of Tex Rickard put a crimp in the fight racket, a crimp that has the sport reeling," Willard declared today. "The vitality of the once great promoter with his sparkling, heroic promotion genius, has left the game feeble and impotent of showmanship which carried it to great heights.

Jess All Through With Ring Game

"I'm through with fights and fighters," Jess states. "I most certainly have no regrets for my own experiences in the ring, but I'd never sanction my son Jess Junior entering the professional prize ring. In fact I want him to have nothing to do with professional athletics. College football, baseball or athletics of that type are perfectly okay. But the professional boxing 'racket,' never!

"I was always in the fight game, but never of it. When I defeated Jack Johnson and restored the championship to the white race, it wasn't because I was a great champion. It was due rather to the fact that I was able to outwind the colored champion. I stayed away from him and he knocked himself down."

According to Willard, Jack Dempsey's victory at Toledo on that blistering hot day of July 4, 1919 wasn't half as disappointing as it was for him to be knocked down

"When I lost the championship to Dempsey I received my greatest surprise and likewise my severest disappointment," Jess related.

"The title of 'champion' passing from my hands meant nothing compared to my grief at being knocked off my feet for the first time.

"I was like all champions. Training annoyed me, my mental frame of mind was not keyed up as it should have been. I lacked enthusiasm. I felt that win or lose the championship was bound to remain in the hands of the white race.

"This is no discredit to Dempsey. He proved my superior. He deserved the title and the remorse that always follows the loss of a championship was more than evened up by the caliber of the man who succeeded me."

By JACK CONWAY

Ernie Schaaf has been made a favorite for his ten-round bout with Dick Daniels of Minneapolis, which will be staged by the Argonne A. A. at the Arena tonight.

Schaaf will attempt to perform an iron man stunt by making it two victories in major bouts within a period of four days. On last Friday night in the New York Garden, Schaaf crashed through with a decisive victory over the hard hitting Jimmy Braddock, Jersey heavyweight.

Jack Conway

Schaaf came through the Braddock bout unmarked. He returned to Boston Saturday evening. He went immediately to his home in Wrentham. Ernie stepped in at Toland's gym for some limbering up exercises on Sunday. He says he is in perfect condition for his mixup with Daniels and that he is confident will come through with a decisive victory.

Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight champion, will act as one of Schaaf's seconds tonight. Sharkey has known Ernie Schaaf in the fine points of the fistic game and says his protege is ready to tackle any heavyweight in the world. Since Schaaf has been working under the direction of Sharkey, he has been the highly touted Max Baer and Braddock.

Red Sox Rookie May Make Good in First Season

By JOE CASHMAN

Remember the sensation caused by George Uhle when he stepped right off the Cleveland sandlots to become a winning pitcher with the Indians?

It was the first time in years that this most difficult of baseball jumps had been accomplished in a single leap, and it is still regarded as one of the sport's greatest miracles, for nobody has done it since.

Well, don't be surprised if one of the new Red Sox duplicates the feat this season.

If young Marvin Olson, rookie infielder from the Sioux City stockyards is just half as good as every critics who has seen him in action claims he is, he will make the grade with plenty to spare.

The chances of any player clearing the distance between semipro ranks and the big leagues in one hop are so slim that rarely is anything expected of those who attempt it.

Yet, so highly has Olson been recommended that Bob Quinn threatens to fire all his scouts if the youngster doesn't become a regular from the start.

Not only is Olson the most highly-touted sandlotter to come up to the big show since the days of Uhle, but until the Sox signed him up, he was also the most coveted semipro player ever.

Refused Several Flattering Offers

For four years he turned down offer after offer from big league and class AA clubs only to agree to terms with the Sox late last season.

Ivory hunters are inclined to predict failure in the big leagues for players they sought in vain, but each and every scout who followed the career of Olson says that he was ready for the big show when he first appeared on a stockyard team back in 1927 and that he can't possibly fail to make good with a bang in fast company now.

Olsen's refusal to listen to easily offers wasn't due to any objection to playing big league ball but rather to a desire to secure a college education.

He paid his way through Luther College at Sioux City with the money he earned playing for the stockyard team and wouldn't turn pro until he had completed a four-year course at the institution.

Stronger clubs that were seeking him can't understand, however, why he decided to finally sign up with the lowly Sox.

It was probably because he figured that he would have a much better chance of winning a regular berth with the Fenway flock than with most clubs.

Olson is a second baseman who bats righthanded. He is 23 years old, 5-07 in height and weighs 165, and his home is in Gayville, So. Dakota.

For the sake of a lot of fine Red Sox scouts we hope that Olson lives up to all the good things that have been said about him.

IF You Don't Know—

Ferrell, Porter, Averill, Morgan and Hodapp, the big five of the Cleveland Indians, are all unsigned, as yet. . . . The St. Louis hockey team of the American League is believed to have set a new record for consecutive defeats in pro hockey by dropping 10 games in a row. . . . The University of Florida has scheduled 21 baseball games for this coming spring, with additional tilts with the Braves and the Newark Bears still pending. . . . Twelve ski jumpers competed in the first national tourney at Chicago in 1906 before 50 spectators . . . This year 50,000 persons watched several hundred competitors. . . . Since 1900 the University of Illinois baseball teams have won the Western Conference championship 16 times. . . . Jose Capablanca, former world's chess champion, will tackle 200 opponents simultaneously in New York on Feb. 12. . . . Joe Primeau, Toronto hockey star, was passed up by the New York Rangers. . . . So was Marty Barry of the Bruins.

Galicia Soccer Team Puts Fore River Out of Cup Play

Fore River, Massachusetts' last representative in the fight for National cup honors, was put out of the cup play when the Galicia eleven of New York trimmed the Shipbuilders, 5 to 2, at Fore River Field, Quincy.

The game was a regular cup battle but the New Yorkers carried too many guns for the locals, who were aving an off day.

The Galicia eleven and Newark are the two semifinalists who will await the outcome of the round robin series between the American League clubs.

Fall River and Hakoah are away out front in these series and unless they lose every contest from now on will be the other clubs to battle it out in the semifinals.

Local fans are getting enthused over the coming contest at the Boston Garden between the Boston Celtics and Providence, which is scheduled for February 5. The game will be played with seven men to a side and should prove quite an innovation among followers of the booting sport who usually have to freeze to death to witness the sport.

The locals tried hard to equalize but their attacks were easily broken up by the Galicia team's defense and the latter went on to register two more goals, McCombie netting both.

Guldahl Wins 1st Big Golf Tourney

Riviera Country Club, Hollywood Jan. 26 (US)—Ralph Guldahl, 19-year-old Texas phenom, won his first major golf tournament since he turned professional a little more than a year ago, beating Tony Manero, Elmsford, N. Y., here in the final round of the motion picture charity match play open tournament.

Guldahl won on the 36th green one up, after what was acclaimed by every professional and amateur in the gallery, as the greatest 36-hole match ever staged in Southern California.

Londos Takes On McMillen Tonight

Wrestling will score another sell-out at Madison Square Garden tonight, when Jim Londos, recognized as heavyweight champion in some states, defends his title against Jim McMillen, former University of Illinois football player.

Danie's Has Kick in Right Hand Wallop

Daniels packs a terrific kick in his right hand drive. This is the blow which will cause Schaaf the most concern tonight. It is a short, straight punch and lands with terrific force.

Daniels dropped Johnny Risko twice with right hand punches in their bout at the Boston Garden. He also scored a knockdown in his first meeting with Al Friedman at the Arena.

Jack "Twin" Sullivan, old-time Cambridge boxer, has tuned Daniels up for tonight's mill. The venerable "Twin" says the youthful Daniels has improved a lot since we last saw him and will not find it difficult to score with his right hand smash against Schaaf.

There isn't anything fancy about the boxing styles of either Schaaf or Daniels. This should make it develop into a rugged fight.

I believe that Schaaf's superior experience and ring craft as an infighter will enable him to win.

McCarthy and Perry in Semifinal Mill

Jack McCarthy of Roxbury and Jack Perry of Worcester will clash in an eight-round semifinal. McCarthy is one of the most promising of the younger crop of heavyweights. Perry has shown to advantage in Worcester matches and says he will give McCarthy plenty of opposition.

There will also be two six-rounders and two four-round matches.

Amateur Heavyweights Will Give Fans Action

I find considerable interest in the appearance of the amateur heavyweights at the international show at the Boston Garden on February 2. Matt Flanagan, hard-hitting Irish heavyweight, has received much attention from close observers of the boxing game. He is said to be one of the best of the simon purest.

Then there is Franz Van Der Ausweraer of the Belgian team. He has been boxing since 1927 and has not lost a decision. He is 21 years old, weighs 194 pounds, and has been champion of his own country for four years.

Bill Cuddy has selected Uncle Sam's 135-pound team. They are Johnny Mack, Taunton; Joe Delano, Boston; Jimmy McCarron, Somerville.

Angel Guardian Six Gets Even Break

Angel Guardian hockey team won over Holley Engineering School, 4 to 3, on Angel Guardian rink, Jamaica Plain. The Brookline Cub took the measure of Angel Guardian, 4 to 1, in another week-end game.

Bruins in Fray With Quakers on Garden Ice Tomorrow

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

BOSTON TEAM IN BEST FORM OF SEASON

By BILL GRIMES

During the current week, the Toronto Maple Leafs have an opportunity to overtake Les Canadiens, the International division leaders, for the charges of Connie Smythe are only four points back of Cecil Hart's gang, and will play four games against two scheduled for the Flying Frenchmen.

Unfortunately for the crew of Smythe, one of these games will be played in Ottawa, which is a tough spot for the Maple Leafs. Not since the days when Eddie Powers of the Tigers was managing the old Senators has Toronto been able to win in Ottawa.

Bill Grimes

The Leafs open the week with the Americans in New York tomorrow night and they are due to jump from Gotham to Ottawa for a Thursday night encounter with the Senators, back home for a Saturday night encounter with the struggling but unsuccessful Quakers and then out to Detroit to be entertained by Jack Adams' Falcons Sunday evening.

As the Chicago Blackhawks do not play again until next Sunday when Les Canadiens will visit their fair city, the Bruins are assured of retaining their hold on first place in the American division, regardless of the outcome of their games with the Philadelphia Quakers at the Garden tomorrow night or their tussle with the Rangers in New York on Thursday next.

Although the Bruins were set back by the Americans last week they are still the cream of the N. H. L. They are taking every game in stride, and will be, barring accidents, at the top of their form for the playoffs and the battle for the Stanley Cup.

The Rangers returned to New York from Detroit today, and will await the arrival of Art Ross and his Bruins, which is scheduled for Thursday. The following day they will entrain for Montreal for a tilt with the slipping Maroons.

The poor Philadelphia Quakers are facing one of the toughest schedules of the week, playing three games, which call for journeys to Boston and Montreal, where they will tackle the Flying Frenchmen and Toronto.

Indians Are Busy in Can-Am League

In the Canadian-American League the Springfield Indians will be the busy outfit this week. Of the four games scheduled for the minor leaguers the Indians will participate in three. They open with the Rhode Island Reds in Providence on Wednesday, make their first appearance in more than a month at the Garden against the Tigers the following night, and on Saturday they will mix it up again with the Powers-men at home.

The Indians have won all but three of the 20 games they have played this season. They set a dazzling pace for 13 games, until they were halted by the Philadelphia Arrows and since then they have dropped two games to Providence.

Had the Indians been allowed to retain their original lineup, there is no question but that they would have established a record for unbroken defeats. But the New York Rangers reaped strength and they raided their farm, the Indians, taking Joe Jerwa and Cecil Dillon, and allotting Hal Beattie to the Bruins.

Springfield is the best city on the Can-Am circuit but the fans will not stand for the club to be operated from New York, regardless of whether the outside interference comes from Col. Hammond or Lester Patrick. There is not another club in the league that is more than breaking even, other than Springfield and the Tigers and Eagles are very much in the red.

EARNSHAW WARMS UP

GEORGE EARNSHAW, star pitcher of the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics, is shown in the above Associated Press photo as he started on a round of golf at Hot Springs, Ark. Earnshaw is doing his warmup work early. He wants to have a good year on the mound. He will be in fine shape this season.

Passing the Puck

According to Frank Synnott, he made no statement concerning the much disputed goal in Springfield last week, but Yip Foster and Bob Taylor of the Tigers tell a different story.

At the time of the alleged goal, Synnott, who was refereeing with Davis, told his co-worker that the puck did not go into the net. "I'm running this game," the players overheard Davis say, and Synnott allowed him to get away with it.

Synnott has been connected with hockey as a player and an official for years. He should have known that he had equal power with Davis and therefore should have reversed the decision.

Howie Morenz, who has been out of Les Canadiens' lineup with a back injury, returned to action against the New York Americans and contributed two goals.

While studying law at Harvard, Dave Ingalls, assistant secretary of the Navy, played with the B. A. A. hockey team. He was one of the best amateurs ever to show in this city. In fact, he rated with the best the game ever produced.

Down in Philadelphia, the fans are of the opinion that Eddie Shore is the last word in hockey players. Eddie staged a couple of his most thrilling solos for the benefit of the Quaker City fans on Saturday, and will be the talk of the town for the remainder of the season.

A delegation of Quincy fans is due to call upon President C. F. Adams of the Bruins, who was responsible for the Boston Hockey Club getting across its drive for expense money to make the trip to Poland, and enter a protest against the "railroading" of Fink Hall.

From Tommie Gorman's "if the price is right" offer to purchase the Ottawa franchise, one would think that he was trying to do the owners of the Senators a favor by taking the club off their hands. Gorman is far too pro-Canadian to be anything but a detriment to the N. H. L.

The Springfield fans are up in arms over the mandate received by Manager Frank Carroll from the Rangers to remodel the Indians. Siebert was ordered to the forward line and Chief Maracle dropped back on the defense, while Deacon Waite was benched in favor of Heller.

Jack Keating, of the New Haven Eagles, is one of the most promising of this year's crop of newcomers in the Canadian-American League. He is exceptionally fast, very shifty and is fortified with a clever shot.

Although the New York Americans have been censured in every N. H. L. city for playing defensive hockey, there is no team in the league which drops its offense more quickly than the Rangers. Just as soon as the Rangers get one goal in front of an opponent, they pack the defense.

One of the most objectionable features of the present day hockey is the permitting of a defending team to shoot the puck the length of the ice.

Bill Cleary and Doc Gautreau are two of the best of officials in these parts. They know the rules, have played the game, use excellent judgment and they are NOT afraid to call them as they see them.

As the referee's decision is final, nothing can come of the Tigers' protest of the recent Springfield game.

Despite the fact that they managed to emerge from the game with a tie, the Tigers gave one of their poorest exhibitions of the season against the Eagles. They did not appear to do anything right and therefore were overjoyed when they got an even break.

When Les Canadiens bought a 50 per cent interest in the Providence club and requested that Sprague Cleghorn retire as manager of the Reds, the former N. H. L. star called off his negotiations with the New York Americans who were hot on his trail.

The Tigers will be idle only as far as championship games are concerned, until Thursday night, when they meet the Springfield Indians at the Garden, for Manager Eddie Powers has scheduled practice sessions for every day.

with Hack Wilson and Kiki Cuyler.

According to announcement from New Haven between forty five and fifty competitive sports events have been scheduled to be contested between Harvard and Yale this year. That's three times the number contested between Cambridge and Oxford, who some of the alleged better minds at dear old Harvard seem to be aping.

Jim London, the heavyweight champion in New York, but just a wrestler here in the brownbread and Browning belt, is busier than a bird dog in a briar patch. Tonight he "defends his title" against Jim McMillin in Gotham and on Friday meets Rudy Dusek here in the Boston Garden. He also probably will appear in Philadelphia and Oakoah in the next few days.

If Dempsey comes back to fight Carnera that bout completely will overshadow the Schmeling-Stribling affair or any other ring attraction. The old Manassa Mauler still is the Box Office King.

Duffer Laughs at Business Depressions and Plays Golf

New York, Jan. 26 (AP)—Come fair weather or foul, high market or low, John J. Duffer plays golf.

Football, basketball, intercollegiate sport generally, the stock market, and many industries, were in the doldrums during 1930, but not the grand old game the canny Scots popularized.

From wave-kissed Isle on Long Island, swept by North Atlantic breezes to Pebble Beach on the Monterey Peninsula of California, fringing the blue Pacific, a constantly increasing army of niblick wielders marched down the months from January to December across an enlarging battlefield of greens and fairways.

There were isolated instances of depression both in course improvement and in the number of players notably at New Orleans and some places through the midwest where the drouth hit hardest, but generally speaking 1930 was a boom year in golf.

The year was noted for the large increase of municipal links and the play on them and on existing courses. At Seattle 250,000 golfers used the municipal courses in 1930, as compared to 190,000 in 1929, a increase of almost 50 per cent.

At the end of golf royalty—Atlanta, Bobby Jones' home town 73,863 more persons played golf last year than played two years ago, 20,000 of that number playing on the new John White municipal course of nine holes. Work is continuing on the new 18-hole municipal course named for the emperor, Jones, and before the summer has waned it will be open for play.

Some localities, among them Boston and Los Angeles, reported a loss in membership among the private clubs but an increase on the municipal links, indicating that many "gentleman golfers" had been forced by the exigencies of the business situation to play their golf on a pay as you play plan. But they played, somewhere, the reports indicate.

"Golf has business depression stymied in Northern California during 1930," reported the Associated Press sports editor at San Francisco.

Through the Middle West there was no boom in course building during the year, but there was a large increase in the number of players using public links.

Through New England and the East generally the same story was repeated.

BOSTON MATCH FOR MAT 'FIND'

Sandor Szarbo has been signed by Ray Fabiani to appear on his card of wrestling at the Boston Garden on Friday night. He will oppose Casey Berger, a former Iowa University football player.

Szarbo is a Hungarian. He comes from the town of Kassa. It was while working in a butcher shop in his native city when he saw his first wrestling bout at a circus. He became interested in the sport and represented his country in the Olympics in 1924 and again in 1928.

Jack Curley induced Szarbo to come to this country. The youthful star furnished an upset in Philadelphia when he tossed Rudy Dusek, who clashes with Jim London, Greek heavyweight wrestler, in the feature bout at the Boston Garden on Friday night. Szarbo pinned Dusek in 42 minutes 51 seconds.

London will come to Boston to finish his training following his meeting with Jim McMillen, former Illinois star, at the New York Garden tonight.

McMillen uses the flying tackle like Sonnenberg and other former college football players who have come in for the game. The New York Garden may be sold out for tonight's show. London is picked to win.

Indoor Polo Games Drawing Big Crowds to Armory

Devotees of the indoor pony polo game are displaying plenty of enthusiasm this winter at the Commonwealth Armory where the Boston Indoor Pony Polo League stages a double header every Saturday night.

Judging from the attendance the seating capacity will have to be increased when the feature contests come along.

Next Saturday night a program has Tim Clark's Battery team making its first appearance against The Harvard Jayvees will oppose Westwood in a Class A contest, the Crimson freshmen in a Class B match that should puck the Armory.

The Battery trio, with Johnny Hopewell John "Slim" Walsh and Tim Clark is the highest rated aggregation in the league. Clark is rated at 8 goals, Walsh at 4, and Hopewell 2, a total of 14.

Capt. Frederick Sharp's Westwood trio, despite its large goal allowance, will have to be at best to hold this fast riding Battery outfit.

Harvard Frosh Trio Is Capable

The tilt between the two Harvard outfits should be exciting and interesting with the freshmen, led by Lowell Dillingham, the likely winner.

Dillingham is high scorer of the league with 17 goals to his credit, one more than Capt. Ebby Gerry of the Crimson varsity team.

According to officials of the league the appearance of New York's high goal team composed of Cyril Harrison, Gerard Smith and McDonald Jones at the local armory, is almost a certainty.

Opposing the New Yorkers will be Winston Guest, the International ajust; Tim Clark and Ebby Gerry, captain of the Harvard team.

Two Wins in Day for B. C. Frosh Sextet

The Boston College freshman hockey team added another pair of victories to its string when it defeated Nashua high (N. H.) and St. Anselm's. After taking the measure of the prep schoolers, 5-1 in the afternoon at Manchester, the Eaglets hopped across to Nashua to take on the high school team in evening, 7-4. Ray Funchion was the scoring star of the day with five goals to his credit.

"I Am Gratified to See You Openly Using the Word 'Spit'"

CITY OF LYNN
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH
JAMES A. DUMAS, M.D., COMMISSIONER
July 8, 1930.
American Cigar Company,
111 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.
Gentlemen—
Spit is one of the words which we have learned to avoid in polite parlance. But in our distaste for the use of an unpleasant word, there is a likelihood of minimizing the dangers of contamination which this word connotes.
I am, therefore, gratified to see you openly using the word spit in your advertising of cigars.
The ever-present possibility of infection from heedless spitting habits is most vital in any consideration of health maintenance. You may, of course, publish this letter if it will help.
Yours very truly,
James A. Dumas M.D.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Dumas writes: "The ever-present possibility of infection from heedless spitting habits is most vital in any consideration of health maintenance."

DUFFY TO GET CONTRACT AT B. C.

Hugh Duffy, varsity baseball coach at Boston College, and former big league star, will be offered another contract to coach B. C.'s baseball team this spring.

There has been talk that Duffy's contract would not be renewed this year, but the rumor was spiked last night by Graduate Manager John P. Curley of Boston College.

Mr. Curley said that these rumors were utterly without foundation in fact, and that no action whatever had been taken by the Boston College authorities upon Duffy's re-engagement as varsity coach.

"Nothing official will be known about the matter until Wednesday evening when the graduate board on athletics will hold its next meeting. At that time the position of baseball coach will be discussed for the first time," said Mr. Curley today.

"Hughey Duffy is a loyal friend of Boston College and he feels that we want him to return in charge of the baseball activities again this spring, he will not refuse. This could be the only reason at the present time for his non-appearance at the Heights next season, his own desire to retire."

Mr. Curley was commissioned to interview Duffy and he received only favorable answers from the coach in regard to returning as B. C. mentor. Mr. Curley said that he expected Duffy to be offered a new contract that would place him in charge of varsity baseball for at least two years at B. C.

Failures of Team Not Duffy's Fault

"There has been talk among the alumni," said Mr. Curley, "as there always is when the team isn't winning all the games. But this apparent failure can hardly be laid to Duffy when one knows that injuries and scholastic difficulties worked havoc with the lineup of the team for the past two years."

Most of the complaints were incurred by the comparatively poor showing the Eagles have made against their arch rivals, Holy Cross, the past three years since the coming of Duffy as the successor to Jack Slattery. The Maroon and Gold has only two decisions over the Crusaders in their annual series in two years.

The Rev. Fr. Charles Roddy S. J., faculty director of athletics refused comment on the case outside of saying that nothing of detail has been done as the most latter, and that the first step in the naming of the baseball coach would not be made until the athletic board meeting.

Duffy Succeeded Slattery as Coach

Duffy succeeded Jack Slattery three years ago when the latter was named manager of the Braves. Previous to that he had one of the most colorful and brilliant careers of any baseball player.

His career began with the Boston Nationals in the nineties. Since then he has managed at various times the Boston Red Sox, Chicago White Sox, Philadelphia Nationals and several minor league teams.

He is the holder of the all-time batting record with an average of .438, mark while he was a member of the Chicago White Sox. He is classed with Speaker and Cobb as one of the greatest fielders of history.

Reiselt Leads in Title Cue Play

Chicago, Jan. 26 (AP)—Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia cue artist, held undisputed possession of first place today in the race for the world's three-cushion billiard championship. He had the only perfect record in the week-old tournament. Reiselt leaped into the leadership yesterday on the strength of four victories as two Chicagoans, Allen Hall and Arthur Thornblad, received their first setbacks.

Reiselt meets Hall in the feature match tonight. Other matches are Jacobs vs. Frank Scoville of Buffalo, who is in sixth position, and Denton in fifth place, vs. Jordan.

"GATE" POOR AT N. Y. RING SHOW

New York, Jan. 26 (US)—Had the boxing world been cut in on the long distance conversation between the president of Madison Square Garden, in New York, and Charles "Pop" Foster, in Vancouver, B. C., it would have realized that it is never so bad that it can't get worse.

Mr. William F. Carey had just finished congratulating Foster upon the fight between James Braddock and Ernie Schaaf, 175 Carey was going to Hollywood pronto, for the couple amounted to $14,337.70, and that's not much to a purse that held $293,000 at boxing matches of four years ago.

Pop Foster, however, added new proof to the adage of the clairvoyance when he notified Carey that Jimmy McLarnin would not meet Rib Petrolle, his recent conqueror, in a return match. This tussle, if it could have been arranged, would have drawn $150,000.

Foster stated that McLarnin will battle only welterweights in the future and that he is aiming at a title shot with Tommy Freeman.

CONSTABLE IS HUNTED IN SUIT

Worcester, Jan. 26—Jacob Golden is a constable who has served many papers on many people, but today endeavors were made in vain by many people to serve many papers on Golden.

The constable is missing, and has been for nearly two weeks, it was revealed today when eight suits against him were filed in district court, the suits charging that he misappropriated and converted to his own use a total of $6381.

At his home in Gold st. today, his wife, Mrs. Anna Golden, admitted that the constable vanished early on January 14 and that he telephoned home the same night. Since then nothing has been heard from him.

Mrs. Golden said she believed Golden vanished "because he is in some kind of a money jam." She gave her no information, however, she said.

One of the suits filed today was in behalf of Acsar Schmidt, Inc., of Jersey City, N. J. This suit, for $300, charges that Golden had forged a check he was to serve on Rudolph Chester of Worcester, and instead of serving it, Golden endorsed back that Chester could not be found.

The company claims that Golden, however, actually collected $221.60 from Chester, but converted the sum to his own use. Golden's car suits charge conversion of $58 $35, $150 $72.90, $50, $51.72 and $17.20.

SLEUTH SHOT BY GUNMAN

Detroit, Jan. 26 (AP)—Harry Sominski, undercover investigator for the state police and an important witness of the Wayne County Grand Jury was shot and critically wounded by a gunman in a drug store on Linwood ave today.

Sominski was shot, the police believe, because of his importance as a jury witness.

He spent 30 minutes in the drug store talking with Jacob Yosher, a Hamtramck man who was to have appeared before the grand jury today.

Yosher, who also is known as Kaplan, disappeared after the shooting. He is sought by the police.

NIGHT CLUB WAR LAID TO WOMEN

New York, Jan. 26 (AP)—The wrecking of the Club Abbey and the shooting of one or more Broadway racketeers early Saturday morning was attributed today to a quarrel between two women.

In reconstructing the events, police said they believed Arthur "Dutch" Schultz, Bronx beer baron, was wounded along with Charles "Chic" Sherman who is in Polyclinic Hospital with painful gun and knife wounds. Schultz and his chief aide, known as "Marty the Wolf," are the objects of a quiet search.

Schultz, his two bodyguards and two women were seated near Sherman's party, which included three women. During the course of the entertainment, a woman from Schultz's table and one from Sherman's table started an altercation, one of them using a table knife to defend herself.

The men joined in the argument and soon revolvers and knives were flashing. The lights were shot out. Schultz was whisked away in a taxicab by confederates. He is reported to be a collection agent for "Big Bill" Dwyer in his Harlem beer racket.

Veterans Asked to Join Bonus Drive

Editor Boston American:

"Shut your mouth on Bonus." Bonus," I wonder if the veterans in Maine New Hampshire and Vermont and other states have read Mr. Peabody's letters in the great veterans' paper, the Boston Evening American, the veterans' only newspaper. We want to thank the Boston Evening American for information on the Wright Patman bill.

Now every World War veteran that is not in favor of this bill, take a hold and help out. Art Peabody of 50 Williams ave., Lynn, Mass., has sent plenty of petitions and speeches to send to anyone who writes for them.

Con'n on, vets, over the top and let's tack him up and secure all the signatures we can; the more signatures the better. Write to him f r petitions at once. Let him hear from the veterans from my own. Let's go on record of being 100 per cent behind the Wright Patman bill.

Write to Art Peabody today. We want the cash now. The veterans have the need. We don't have to take it. Let Mellon play awhile longer with it. Reckons we cannot handle the cash, but we can starve for the want of it.

Writer Urges Jury Duty for Jobless

Editor Boston American:

I have been a reader of your paper ever since it has been published, and I always noticed that your paper is a great helper and fighter for the people.

So I take the liberty of writing to you with a suggestion that I think would help the unemployed if it can be done.

And that is, why can't the court call those citizens that are out of work for the jury? That alone would give each man a month's work, that is if it can so be done. "REVERE MAN

One Veteran Who Needs Bonus Now

Editor Boston American:

Responding to the call of a comrade, Roger A. Harris, whose letter on the adjusted compensation appeared in your paper today, will briefly outline my own case which is similar to thousands of other veterans.

Coming to Boston from Arizona for the purpose of lecturing, I find that I cannot be able to put season for the winters bookings.

Realizing the situation I immediately tried to find employment and have failed. Besides job hunting myself, I am listed with three employment agencies.

Now, having a wife and two small children to support, what does one do next? My adjusted service certificate amounts to over $1200. That amount would maintain my family until next year even if work could not be found. Next winter could, however, be a prosperous one, as my illustrated lectures, "The Creator in Hawaii," deals with volcanic activity in the Hawaiian Islands, and is the only one of its kind on the American platform.

However, would it not be better to give the veteran this money owed to him, in this time need, than to force him to seek charity or worse. Out here in Chelsea Naval Hospital all veterans were pleased to read the editorial on Adjusted Compensation in your paper of this date.

"Veterans keep the ball rolling."

GEORGE D. DOUGLAS

Vet Would Spend His Bonus on Operations

Editor Boston American:

Would I throw the money away if paid a cash bonus at once?

At the present time I am in need of three operations, which were decided on at the Chelsea Naval Hospital last May, namely, chronic appendix, kidney trouble and need to have my teeth extracted.

The operations will have to be put off until I drop in the poor house because I am married and have three children depending on me for support.

I filed an application for a pension under the new law because it is impossible for me to prove a service connection as I never answered sick call in my two years of service. I have never heard from it. If they ever give me a pension I may be able to take the time to undergo these three operations.

If cash payment of the bonus was made I could go to a hospital without any worry on my mind and know that my family was not depending on charity while I was there.

My bonus calls for $1584. Id throw it away. Yes I would.

Forget Prohibition; Turn to Bonus, Writes Vet

Editor Boston American:

As I am a war veteran would like to say why do they not leave the prohibition law alone and pass the bonus bill.

Veteran Praises Bonus Fight by American

Editor Boston American:

I'm overwhelmed by the spirit you have shown in regards to the Soldiers' bonus. I am a constant reader of the Boston American and have been for years. It has won us victory before, and with the help of the W. F. W. surely we ought not to lose. No veteran should ever forget your paper. I also hope that when the battle is over that regular veterans will know what organization to join I know plenty of veterans who are not interested in helping, but will be among the first to interest about their cash.

That sort of veteran should

RAIL MERGER IN WEST FAVORED

Washington, Jan. 26 (INS)—The proposed acquisition of stock control of the St. Louis Southwestern Railroad—known as the Cotton Belt, by the Southern Pacific, was characterized today by the Rock Island system as "one of the most elaborate major operations in the history of western railroads."

In a brief filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission the Rock Island said that not only did it mean a substantial departure from the commission's consolidation plan, but that it involved a radical realignment and regrouping of established transportation systems.

"The Southern Pacific, entrenched in Texas, Louisiana, California and in its transcontinental relations, is seeking to become a St. Louis line," the brief said.

The Rock Island said it would have no objection provided certain conditions were observed, particularly to protect interchange of freight at important gateways.

Louis R. Eastman, for minority stockholders, urged the commission to grant the application on condition that the Southern Pacific provide for holders of minority preferred stock of the Cotton Belt.

Signal Flashes Give Hope for Lost Flier

Portland, Ore., Jan. 26 (AP)—Signal flashes seen on Trail Peak area renewed hope today that Walter E. Case, missing Varney Air Lines pilot, may be found alive. Case disappeared Friday morning after he was believed to have encountered bad weather en route from here to Pasco, Wash.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

By ANTHONY ABBOT

Colt Arrives at Scene of Horrible Crime

How the Story Started

Geraldine Foster, a very attractive young reception clerk in the Washington sq. office of Dr. Humphrey Maskell, "Laughing Doctor," vanished from her Morningside Heights apartment in The Esplanade on the night before Christmas. Her roommate, Betty Canfield, reported her disappearance to police three days after Christmas and appealed directly to Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt for aid. He went himself to the apartment to search and question Betty. Torn letters of Geraldine's interested Colt. Then he visited Dr. Maskell, who told of a mysterious dark woman caller. Colt gets a clue about Peddlers' road.

Now Go On

CHAPTER 8

At Peddler's Road

What we had come upon was a two-story wooden house, called a portable, or assembled house, manufactured in sections and often sold through the mail. This was a charming one, in good condition, newly painted white with green windows and door sills. Its green pitch roof and the white scrim curtains produced a pleasing and home-like impression.

"Perhaps," I said, "there is some one home, and we can make inquiries. But first, let's take a look around."

Leading the way, I passed to the rear of the house, where at first I found nothing unusual, except one broken kitchen window. I detected no signs of life, but instead, in the next minute, I came upon startling evidence of death.

Seven pigeons lay dead on the ground almost at my feet. Such a collection of dead birds was sufficiently unusual to make me stop and look more closely, and, while Betty turned away, I picked up one of the pigeons, only to let it fall in sudden dismay; what I had seen greatly startled me—the breast feathers of the dead bird were smeared with red; a scarlet splash against the white breast of the dead creature. The next moment, regretting my weakness, I picked it up and examined it more closely, wondering if some one had been heartless enough to kill all these pigeons out of sheer wantonness. But I could find no wound upon the bird, nor any evidence of violence. One after another, I took the remaining birds into my hands, only to find the same scarlet daubs upon their feathers, and no signs of injury.

Pigeon Blood

"I am sorry, Betty," I said, "but all this is very peculiar. What are these red stains on the poor birds? Have they been drinking red paint and poisoned themselves or—"

I stopped, struck with a fantastic notion. Those stains on the breast,— could they be blood stains? How had they come there? Was there some open stream nearby where the pigeons flew to drink? Had they drunk from a brook that ran red with human blood?

Then I told myself that my mind was making up horror tales. Yet the feeling persisted and it was with deep misgivings I left the birds and followed Betty to the front of the house and, without another word, rapped on the door. There was no answer. Although I knocked repeatedly, Fantastic fears filled my mind—but I told myself they were probably unreasonable. Why should the sight of those dead pigeons so stir up my imagination? Again and again I knocked upon the door, but without result, and finally I impatiently tried the knob. To my surprise, it yielded and the door opened at a slight push of my hand.

Horrible Crime

I stepped inside and then stood, arrested and appalled, rooted at the threshold. My first glance around the living room from which I had walked told me that a horrible crime had been committed there. Everything seemed bedaubed with blood. I have never seen such a spectacle of fury let loose within four walls. Tables, chairs, bookcases all were flung around, topsy-turvy and helter-skelter as if overturned in some life and death struggle. Even in the shadows I could see that blood was smeared everywhere, staining the drapes, spotting the walls and slopped and clotted in dried patches on the floor.

"For God's sake, don't come in here, Betty," I called.

I glanced over my shoulder and got a glimpse of her drawn and frightened face. She had seen, and now she stood there in the winter sunlight with her gloved hands lifted against her cheeks and her eyes closing with fear. Then I turned back to the room. My hand was groping for an electric switch-button when I suddenly stopped.

I heard a noise—the sound of a footstep on the stairs. Only a slight and inconsequential sound it was, merely the scraping of a

MAYOR DEMANDS TAX RIGHT TO AID JOBLESS

Appointment of Eight Judges Sought

TIME NOW FOR ADDITION, DEVER SAYS

No Opposition to Judges' Bill at Hearing Before Legislative Committee

With Joseph B. Ely as Governor the time is ripe to increase the number of Superior Court judges, Rep. Paul A. Dever, of Cambridge today told the joint legislative committee on the judiciary.

Dever appeared in support of his own bill to add eight judges, increasing the number from 31 to 39. Francis J. Roche of Cambridge also spoke in favor. There was no opposition and the committee took the bill under consideration.

"For the first time in many years we have as Governor a man who has active experience as a trial lawyer and he realizes that Superior Court judges should be appointed solely on merit," said Dever.

"I am sure that if he makes appointments to the bench he will be guided only by professional fitness."

Dever said that a civil suit filed today in Suffolk County probably would not come up for trial for four years. Roche said that twice as many cases are being filed now in Middlesex County as were being filed six years ago.

Milk and Butter Prices Take Drop

A sharp decrease in the prices of milk and butter are noted by the New England reporting service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in a statement issued today. Prices for milk last month were lower than they have been for ten years, according to this report. The average price is given as $2.12 per hundred pounds of milk, as compared with a five-year average of $2.86 for December.

Butter averaged 28.7 cents per pound during the first two weeks of the current month, compared with 47.1 cents per pound for the five-year average for January.

$50 Weekly for News and Picture Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or the most unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. Of course, the first one who turns in the tip in an interesting event receives the award on that particular item. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

CURLEY'S FEE BILL TO LIFT TAX BURDEN

Provides for Raising $500,000 in Department Revenues; Wins Strong Backing

City departmental revenues will be increased $500,000, thus relieving the burden of taxation on real estate, if a bill by Mayor Curley, approved by several prominent persons at a hearing before the legislative committee on municipal finance today, becomes law.

Among those who favored it were Thomas H. Bilodeau, legislative counsel for the city; Charles J. Fox, budget commissioner; Senator Henry Parkman, Samuel Silverman, corporation counsel; C. L. Allen, representing the Chamber of Commerce. It was also favored by Boston Real Estate Exchange.

"The present system of fees charged by various departments is a hodge-podge," said Mr. Fox. "The mayor's bill permits the city to establish fees for licenses or permits issued by the city.

"A present 60 per cent of these fees are fixed by statute. There is no equitable relation to present day costs. Boston should be permitted to develop a logical fee system. How illogical the present system is may be gleaned from the fact that it now costs a taller $1 to store one gallon of naphtha on his premises for cleaning clothes, although a garage pays only the same sum for storing thousands of gallons of inflammable material.

"If this bill becomes law it will increase departmental revenues to at least $750,000, possibly $500,000, that would tend to relieve the burden on real estate."

CENTRE ST. BILL IS HELD UP

Absence of all three members of the House committee on engrossed bills today held up for 48 hours the unemployment relief measures that otherwise would have gone to the Governor for signature.

The bills are for the widening of Centre st., Jamaica Plain, at a cost of $1,100,000, and development and improvement of the Taunton river, carrying expenditures of $125,000.

Both measures were rushed through last week under suspension of the rules, and came up in the House today for enactment. It was then learned that Representative J. Kelley of North Attleboro, Norman L. Snow of Springfield and John J. Crowley of Somerville, committee on engrossed bills, were absent.

Had they been present the bills could have been engrossed, enacted in House and Senate, and sent to the Governor for signature. As it is they will have to wait at least 48 hours before becoming laws.

Utilities Ask Right to Publish Decisions

Revival of authority to publish decisions of the Public Utilities Commission was asked for at a hearing before the legislative committee on State administration today by representatives of the gas and electric companies throughout the State.

Sheldon E. Wardwell argued that the publication of the decisions would be of great value not only to the companies but to the public at large.

PRECEDENT IS ESTABLISHED BY PLAN

Governor, Back From Conference, Says U. S. Representative Approved Bond Plan

Gov. Ely announced today that he will personally read his budget message to the two branches of the Legislature Wednesday, thereby establishing a precedent.

The message dealing with the general State appropriation bill has been eagerly awaited and the Governor's announcement served to increase the interest in it. Wednesday is the last day for delivering it, under the law.

TO SPEAK IN HOUSE

The Governor will deliver it from the rostrum in the House chamber, where he made his inaugural address a few weeks ago.

Back at his desk after his trip to Albany, N. Y., where he attended a conference of governors, he plunged into work on the budget in order to whip it into shape in the allotted time.

NATION BACKS BOND STAND

He said that there was a representative of the national government at the Albany meeting and that this individual agreed with him that now is the time for bond issues.

Claimed by Death

FORMER CITY COLLECTOR GEORGE H. JOHNSON died early today at St. Margaret's Hospital. He also had been the city's official "greeter" during the Nichols administration.

G. H. JOHNSON, FORMER CITY GREETER, DIES

Won Praise as City Collector During Nichols Administration; Ill Two Weeks

George H. Johnson, former city collector and director of public celebrations during the administration of Mayor Nichols, died at St. Margaret's Hospital, Cushing ave., Dorchester, early today.

Johnson entered the hospital two weeks ago for treatment for diabetes. He started to sink rapidly late last night. He died at 3:40 a. m.

NAMED CITY COLLECTOR

Johnson became city collector in September, 1926, succeeding William M. McMorrow, who had resigned. Up to that time Johnson had been secretary of the commercial, industrial and publicity bureau at the City Hall.

He was Boston's official "Greeter." Among the notables he welcomed in this capacity were Col Charles Lindbergh, Amelia Earhart and the three fliers of the monoplane, Bremen, the late Baron von Huenfeld, Capt. FitzMaurice and Capt Kuhl.

Previous to his entry into public life Johnson had been engaged in the drug supply business. He was a past exalted ruler of the Boston Lodge of Elks.

BORN IN BOSTON

He was born in Boston in 1868 and attended the public schools in Jamaica Plain. Entering business he worked to a high position in the importing field and became owner of the George H. Johnson Co. of 100 Bowdoin st.

He was the originator of the Elks' charity box fund for needy families in the winter and was active in the affairs of that organization fro mthe time he became a member of the Boston lodge in 1899.

As city collector he won praise from State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long and his report in January, 1929, showed he had brought about a saving of $63,000 to the taxpayers in the cost of conducting the collecting department.

Following his career as a city official he retired from public life and had been living at 340 Central, Jamaica Plain, with his brother, William, who was at the bedside when he died. The only other relative is a niece, Miss Eleanor Cole of 24 Dakota st., Dorchester. In spite of ill health, Johnson took an active part in the American Legion convention last fall.

SIX INJURED IN AUTO CRASHES

Six persons were injured in two Jamaica Plain auto accidents today, a New York couple escaping from their burning auto after one of the crashes.

Max Kahn, 36, and his wife, Jean, of 1892 Daly ave., New York city, were the couple burned. Their heavy sedan was in collision on Center st. with the sedan of William H. Eichorn of 9 Kingshead rd., Lynn. Eichorn was not injured.

David Sullivan, 62, and Mrs. Louise Sullivan, 39, of 9 Commonwealth ter., and Mr. and Mrs. James Gateley of 19 City View rd., all Brighton, were injured in the other accident.

Their car, driven by Mrs. Sullivan, according to the police, skidded near Jamaicaway and Perkins st., and plunged over a 20-foot embankment that slopes to Jamaica Pond. Their injuries were by flying glass.

The Kahn couple were treated for burns and cuts at Faulkner Hospital and the Brighton four were taken to City Hospital by Jamaica Plain police.

BOY GUILTY IN SCHOOL BREAK

In a sealed verdict presented in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court today, Benjamin Mannix of Cambridge was found guilty of breaking and entering and larceny, at the Levi Warren junior high school, Newton.

The case went to the jury late Friday afternoon a verdict being reached that night and ordered sealed by Judge Gibbs.

Mannix and three other youths went on trial on charges of entering the school and the larceny of $124 in cash and 200 pieces of silver.

Edward J. Scanlon Jr., one of the defendants pleaded guilty and was a witness for the government.

The other two, Fred Burke and Charles Dwyer, remained on trial until the government's case was completed and then pleaded guilty. They took the stand for Mannix and testified he had no connection with the crime. Mannix offered an alibi. The four youths will be sentenced later.

HE LOOKS LIKE JACK DONAHUE. From over Bunker Hill way comes another dancer, who bids well to attain dancing fame, just as the late Jack Donahue's twinkling, shuffling feet brought fame to that Charlestown son. Not many days ago the fast moving feet of Tom Harty patted on the corner pavements of Charlestown, just as did the shoes of Donahue. He is now headed toward dancing prominence. In the photos above you see Tom in step numbers at the Cocoanut Grove, being directed by Mickie Alpert.

Prof Charles E. Fay Dead

Prof Charles E. Fay, professor of modern languages for more than 60 years at Tufts College, Medford died last night at the Phillips House, following a long illness.

Among many interesting things Dr. Fay was known as a great enthusiast in mountain climbing. He was first president of the American Alpine Club.

He was born in Roxbury, March 19, 1844, while his father was pastor of the Roxbury Universalist Church. His mother died when he was four years old and he was placed in a private school in New York. Between the ages of 11 and 18 he was a pupil at high schools of Concord, N. H.; Middleton, Conn., and Providence, R. I.

He was offered a position as teacher in a district school at Nashua, N. H. not long after his graduation from the Providence high school. Following the advice of his father, he accepted the appointment, thus beginning his career as an educator. He was appointed master of a grammar school at Bristol, R. I., the next year.

At that school, Prof Fay came under the influence of Prof. Joshua Kendall, principal of the Rhode Island State Normal school, who persuaded the young teacher to resume his studies and go to college, with the result Prof. Fay graduated at Tufts in the fall of 1865.

Duane Is Against Teachers' Raise

To release more money for unemployment relief, Mayor Patrick J. Duane of Waltham will recommend the elimination from the school department budget of the annual automatic salary increases for teachers and other employes.

Superintendent William H. Slavton, who recommended the increases, estimated they would total about $4000.

The budget totals $644,109, or $5891 less than the 1930 budget. The budget will come before the committee Monday evening, February 2.

Death Lays Heavy Hand on Home of Dorchester Man

Death and coincidence joined hands yesterday to inflict double sorrow in the home of John Mahoney at 6 Fuller st., Dorchester. Mahoney stricken Saturday night, died at City Hospital within a few hours of the death of a boarder in his home, Michael Fanning, 81, who had resided with Mahoney at the hospital the night previous.

Fanning went to the hospital with Mrs. Mahoney after her husband was taken to that institution, and they returned home together, Fanning retiring apparently in good health.

Yesterday Mrs. Mahoney found him dead when she went with his room to wake him for church.

Funeral services for Mahoney, who was employed in the city public works department, will be held from his home Wednesday.

Fanning will be buried the same day from the home of his niece in Jamaica Plain.

Benton Denies He Wants Tarr's Job

The situation with reference to Frederick H. Tarr, as to whether he will be reappointed as United States attorney for the Boston district or whether a successor will be named in his place, took a new twist yesterday when it became known that Jay R. Benton, former Massachusetts attorney-general, who is being mentioned as a likely choice for the berth is not anxious to get the office.

Benton stated that he is "not a candidate for the appointment" and that he "has not been campaigning for it either." Asked directly if he would accept the appointment if it were tendered to him, Mr Benton said that he "can't promise any bridges until he comes to them."

Harty "a Second Donahue," Heads for Dancing Fame

The shadow of Bunker Hill, that darkened and lengthened a dozen weeks ago in sorrow for the passing of a comical native son, is thinning and shortening now under the brightening light of another one.

And—as strange are the ways of the world—both native sons of Charlestown looked alike, talked alike, had the same mannerisms and dispensed the same laugh-engendering absurdities.

Jack Donahue whose twinkling, shuffling feet first patted on the corner pavements of Charlestown passed.

Tom Harty, whose twinkling, shuffling feet first patted on the corner pavements of Charlestown advances.

During the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund Show at the Keith Boston theater a slim lad slid out on the stage, contorted boneless limbs in startling manoeuvers, and the packed house gasped—for here was the lamented Jack Donahue's double, from features to feet.

And when he spoke and went into his jokes, the startling thing was complete.

IS A NEWCOMER

Not with his resemblance but with his skill and his comicalities. Tom Harty brought down the house.

Exactly three weeks before that night, Tom Harty had started dancing before the general public at the Cocoanut Grove, under direction of Mickie Alpert, yet he had the poise and assurance of a hoofer who had been on big stages for years.

He has been dancing at Cocoanut Grove until a couple of weeks ago when a plane fell on him while he was clowning with another act—and the resulting temporary injury, together with approach of his midyear examinations at Boston College Law School, took him off the boards for a time. But when his examinations are over he will be back.

The dancing lawyer—for he intends to complete his law course—was born in Elm st., Charlestown, 24 years ago, only a few shuffles from the birthplace of his double, Jack Donahue.

His father is Thomas B. Harty, director of amateur shows, and his mother, before her work of raising a family consumed too much of her time, used to sing.

FATHER HIS TEACHER

Tom Harty picked up dancing himself, but when his father saw that he was inclined toward dancing he instructed his son in the rudiments of a routine. That is all the instruction he ever had.

In 1925, when he was 19, he saw Jack Donahue in "Be Yourself," with Queenie Smith, and without realizing that there was a startling physical resemblance between himself and Donahue, resolved that he liked that style of dancing.

Later, when Donahue was in Boston with "Sunny," Tom Harty met him, and Donahue matched steps with him and showed him, privately, some of the Donahue routine—because Jack Donahue was like that.

The dancing law-student made his first appearance before an audience in 1928 when he danced in a show put on by the insurance company for which he worked.

Thereafter, and until he came under the wing of Mickie Alpert, he danced occasionally at smoke talks and small private entertainments.

But now, apparently, he is headed some place—and will have his local training as a background.

Four Held for Trial After Raid in Cafe

The two proprietors and four waiters of the O Sole Mio cafe, 238 Tremont st., pleaded not guilty to violations of the prohibition laws before U. S. Commissioner Jenney today and were held for trial later. Federal agents told of seizing three gallons of wine and a gallon and a half of gin in the place Saturday.

Antonio Rosetti and Constantino Mandolilli, described as the proprietors of the cafe, were held in $1000 bail each, and the following waiters were held in $500 each: Thomas Manini, Albert Amodei, Joseph Priore and Dean Maldian.

225 New Citizens Administered Oaths

Two hundred and twenty-five Boston men became citizens today in a ceremony in the United States District Court in the presence of a large number of their friends and relatives. Judge James A. Morton gave them a talk on the Constitution and the duties of citizenship, after which Clerk Mason read the oath and Judge Morton swore the group to allegiance to their adopted country.

DANIEL AHERN LAID TO REST

Civic leaders and friends of the newspaper field paid final tribute today to Daniel E. Ahearn, veteran cashier of the Boston Globe, at a solemn high Mass of requiem in the church of St. John the Evangelist, Winthrop.

Ahearn died Friday at the Brooks Hospital, Brookline, after a short illness. He made his home in Winthrop for the past 35 years.

The Mass was celebrated by Rev James Carroll, pastor, with Rev Hugh Conroy, chaplain at Deer Island, deacon and Rev James Flynn, of St. Mary's Star of the Sea Church, East Boston, subdeacon.

Pallbearers were Irvin A. Harvey, John I. Taylor, James T. Sullivan and C. Joseph Harvey of the Boston Globe; Col. Thomas F. Sullivan, city of Boston transit commissioner; John W. Herbert, Percy Hatch and Herbert M. Clough. The last three are Winthrop friends.

Burial services were at the family lot, Calvary Cemetery, West Roxbury.

COMPETITION IS CALLED UNFAIR

I. C. C. Control to Be Demanded for Motor Companies in Battle for Business

Boston & Maine employes today prepared to do everything in their power to aid the railroads of the nation in their fight against the encroachment of motor buses and trucks in the transportation industry.

This decision was reached yesterday at the annual meeting of the system's board of adjustment for the Brotherhood of Railway Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers Express and Station Employes in the Hotel Manger.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED

A resolution explaining in detail the situation created by the motor buses and trucks was unanimously adopted by the meeting and copies will be sent to the grand lodge officers with the request that like action be taken by all affiliated organizations to make successful legislative fight.

The resolution was adopted after attention was called to the need for railroads and the danger of the railroads' financial systems breaking down as a result of the "unfair competition of motor trucks and buses operating over the highways without adequate supervision and regulation as to rates, conditions of employment and passenger insurance."

Effort is to be made to secure legislation placing motor competition under the control of the I. C. C. and insisting on regulations for hours of labor and rates of pay.

HITS UNFAIR COMPETITION

It is further provided that some scheme be evolved whereby reliable information may be obtained on truck and bus service in the various communities, along the Boston & Maine system, and, when in the judgment of the general chairman, furnish this information to the management of the company.

'Debs' Must Pass Tough 'Exams' to Gain Junior League Membership

MARY WARREN CONSTANCE WENTWORTH ELLA CUSHING DEBORAH HALL POLLY PROCTER

FRIDAY, THE 13TH OF FEBRUARY, is final examination day for debutantes, now known as provisional members of the Junior League. The "unlucky day" holds no terrors for these girls bidding for full membership in the league. Just being a member of a socially prominent family means nothing toward entrance to the Junior League now. The girl must pass a difficult examination, which shows that she, besides being able to shine in social events, must be fitted with a general knowledge of the world's doings. At the Junior League headquarters the candidates have listened to several interesting lectures by Mrs. Eva Whiting White and other leading social workers. This is part of the course on instructions that lead up to the examinations.

Among the note makers at lecture sessions are: Miss Mary Warren, Boston; Miss Constance Wentworth, Milton; Miss Ella Cushing, Milton; Miss Deborah Hall, West Medford, and Polly Proctor, Milton. (Staff photos.)

GEN. EDWARDS STILL GAINING

Gen. Clarence R. Edwards once more was "holding his own" today in his grim fight to ward off death, a comfortable night having given him renewed strength with which to battle.

In a bulletin issued at 1.15 p. m., Drs. Robey Miller and Chester said:

"Gen. Edwards passed a fairly comfortable night and is a little stronger today. His temperature, pulse and respiration are normal and he has talked more than he has for several days."

His name is still on the danger list, however, having been placed there Saturday night when he had an alarming setback.

His improvement since that relapse has been remarkable, his physicians said today, but they are watching him closely in his sick room at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, because two bad spells within a week have taxed his vitality considerably.

The general continues to eat what his doctors describe as a "good liquid diet." His only visitors yesterday were his sister, Mrs. Charles Otis, her husband, and Dr. Harvey Cushing, who made an informal call.

The city council today endorsed the movement for cash payments on soldiers adjusted compensation certificates in an order introduced by Councillor Albert Fish of Dorchester.

The order provided that copies of the endorsement be sent to Massachusetts Congressmen and Senators at Washington urging legislation for early payment.

Green succeeded in having an order passed requesting the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. to announce whether or not it was to discontinue the Charlestown Gas Co. plant under the proposed merger of the two companies. Councillor Green said 100 men would be thrown out of work if the plant were closed.

B. U. Preacher Raps Hoover and Wickersham Board

The Wickersham commission, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the Anti-Saloon League and President Hoover were scored yesterday from the pulpit in a sermon of Rev. Richard K. Morton, Boston University school of theology.

Discussing the recent report of the commission, Rev. Morton said the American people are starving a might reaction against the "clumsy control of reforms."

"The Wickersham report is one of the weakest documents, of the extremely weak dry campaign," he said in a sermon from the pulpit of the Community Church of Christ, in Revere.

COUNTRY STIRRED

"The country is stirred to its depths over this significant and nation-threatening issue, and it awaited with real hope an authoritative and powerful statement from the commission.

"What came was an amazing hodge-podge of weak, useless mumblings, and a hopeless diversity of opinion. This is typical of the present rout of the dry sentiment.

"Many prohibitionists are scared to have anyone impartially probe the facts about this problem. In all its work the dry cause bungled and failed."

ATTACKS WORK OF W. C. T. U.

He described the Women's Christian Temperance Union as one of a noble heritage but "without insight to match its enthusiasm."

"It often becomes dictatorial and autocratic, not to say fanatical, and it nullifies its own work by internal disagreements," he said.

"The Anti-Saloon League too has an obsolete name and even more obsolete methods. Its blunderings and poor leadership have resulted in its repudiation by many churches in this and other sections of the State.

"These reformers are forgetting the traditions of American democracy. Because the cause is good they would have freedom to do as they will. They have no faith in the judgment of the people, no faith in long-tried traditions of social life and government.

"Even the resident simply clarifies his own position on the matter, rather than furnishes a solution. He is confronted with a formless, clamoring mob—and there is no one who will furnish real leadership or real light on the question."

MERCURY HITS 46 IN BOSTON

The warmest Jan. 26 in six years was recorded at the weather bureau today following the sharpest break of a cold spell in an equal number of years.

The break was a difference of 33 degrees between the 8 a. m. reading of yesterday, and today, the mercury jumping from 9 to 42 degrees.

Six years ago the maximum reading was 48, and today's high was 46 at noon.

While the southwest winds fanned Boston and the rest of New England, northern Vermont was digging itself out of last night's snow that tied up traffic.

Centering at Burlington, however, the Vermont storm of last night caused a bad tieup today with a week-end party marooned outside the city and buses and automobiles tied up on the snow-clogged roads.

A snowplow was rushed from St. Albans to rescue the Burlington-to-St. Albans bus that was snowbound at Georgia Center.

The thawing weather will continue in Boston, at least, through the night, the weather man says, with temperatures in the high 30's and 40's.

Avoid Half-Cured Colds!
Half cured colds are a source of great danger! Many a case of Flu grows out of these. When you catch cold take steps to get it out of your system quickly and clean. That calls for something more than your old-fashioned cold "cures." It calls for a treatment such as Mc-Kesson's Luxol. Luxol acts with double speed and effectiveness. It changes the system from an acid condition to alkaline condition, in which cold and grippe germs do not thrive. Two tablets every three hours with a full glass of water will usually stop a cold in 6 hours and drive it completely out of the system in 12. So bad effects on heart or stomach. Equally effective for headaches and the pains of neuralgia and neuritis. Get Luxol at any modern drug store—guaranteed or money back. A McKesson and Robbins product.

Woman Assists Bandit in Holdup of Taxi Driver

Police along the South Shore are on the lookout for a man and woman who engaged in a widespread search for an armed man and woman who held up and robbed a taxi driver and escaped in his cab in Lakeside drive, Braintree, early today. The cab was later recovered in North st., Randolph, four miles from the holdup scene.

The driver, Charles Thompson reporting the holdup at Milton police headquarters at about 2 a. m., said the couple entered his cab at South Station and ordered him to drive to Milton.

Arriving there they directed him along the road until they reached Lakeside drive. At a lonely spot, they ordered him to stop and he said, the man drew a gun. They forced him to hand over $6 and got in the cab and drove away. He walked to Milton headquarters.

The man is described as being about 31 years old 5 feet, 10 inches and weighing about 135 pounds. The woman was described as about 26 5 feet tall and weighing about 130. Both were well dressed, Thompson told police.

Why Ruin Two Homes? Asks Miss Fairfax

—By BEATRICE FAIRFAX—

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will gladly answer questions regarding heart and home problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal answer enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope. Otherwise, questions of interest will be answered through her daily columns.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

As you help so many, maybe you can help me. I have been married 12 years, and last summer I met a man who has been married six years. I have often met men in my married life, but I payed little attention to them. But this man, Miss Fairfax, is in my mind all the time. As he lives near me I get nervous and my heart goes twice as fast every time I see him. I am trying to be happy in my married life, but I can't just get this man out of mind. Does this mean LOVE has come into my life too late. UPSET.

Beatrice Fairfax

Dear Upset: A very clever English playwright once wrote a play about a situation like yours and called it "Mid-Channel." It seems there's a submerged reef between England and France highly dangerous to navigators and the cause of much shipwreck and disaster. Pinero likened the midyears of marriage to this reef—how every day is good deal like every other day—to that submerged reef. If you don't sail carefully and watch the danger signals, your domestic bark may hit that rock and be lost. You have been married 12 years and the man also—why wreck two homes for something that, after all, is probably no more than a delusion? It's my very earnest hope that you watch your step.

She May Have Company Now

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I like a certain young man very much, but he doesn't seem to pay much attention to me, but to my girl friends. Sometimes I think he doesn't care so much about my girl friends, but is just attentive to them to make me jealous. In the past he has asked me a number of times to go out with him, but I've always had to refuse on account of conditions at home. But now I'm allowed to go out with boy friends to a certain extent, but he doesn't ask me any more. He may think I'm still not allowed to go. Should I inform him that now I may have company? LOUISE.

Dear Louise: By all means, tell him that the ban has been lifted at home and that you are now permitted to go out with your friends.

They Are in School Together

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have read and followed your advice for a long time and so now I am going to ask something concerning myself.

There is a boy who goes to my school whom I like very well. I think he likes me also because he seems to pay more attention to me than to the other girls. There is one thing I can't quite understand. He has never asked me to go with him. One time I think he was going to, because he hinted but then dropped the subject. Do you think that I might encourage him by asking him to my house some evening? I thought at first that it was due to his liking some other girl, but I just found out that he has "broken" with his sweetheart. —TOT.

Dear Tot: Ask your mother if you may invite the school friend to Sunday night supper. That's a nice informal sort of meal that people usually get themselves and, in helping to tidie here and there, he probably will forget his bashfulness and have the time of his life. Thanks for the kind words.

Feed Child to Make Vitality

Malnutrition Comes From Low Diet

By R. S. COPELAND, M.D.—

AFTER ALL is said and done, child health depends largely on what the mother gives. Every conscientious mother today is in far better position to successfully rear her children than were her forebears. From the viewpoint of knowledge as to what is best for a child, the modern mother has great advantages.

Dr. Copeland

Of course poverty plays a large part in malnutrition of the child today as it always has. There are great problems to be solved in the future for better care of the child, in education, physical and mental and social development.

Malnutrition comes most commonly from a diet which is incapable of supplying the needs of the body. To keep a child well and happy he must first of all have the foods that make for energy and strength. If a child has not nourishing food, when he does not take sufficient amounts of nutritious food he has improper habits of eating, then something unpleasant is bound to happen. He grows listless, tired, pallid and irritable.

The school child, also the preschool child, for that matter, uses up an enormous amount of energy in his day of work or play. Every movement he makes means just so much energy spent, and this has to be made up in the right kind and amount of food, as well as in rest and sleep.

If he doesn't have the food he so much needs. Nature has a way of taking it from the child's store of body substances in order to make up the deficiency in food. As bone weight, strength and vitality. His teeth and bones grow soft every part of his little body suffers.

One of the greatest factors to be blamed for a too small food intake is the school child's breakfast. In the homes where there is plenty it is not uncommon for children to hurry through a hasty meal, taking scarcely a snatch to eat, and then go running all the way to school because they may be late.

Breakfast should be an unhurried meal, and for his proper nourishment he should have orange juice, or some other form of fruit, cereal and whole milk, and at least a glass of milk. This should be the day right. He has something to go on, to meet the hard work of this morning. He will not be overtired and overhungry at luncheon time.

His luncheon should be adequate. Many a mother sets before her children the easiest thing to find, instead of wholesome, nourishing foods that go to make up the well-balanced meal they should have. Dear mothers, you cannot afford to take any chances with your child's health when it comes to his food and eating habits.

Every child should have plenty of rest and sleep. One of the shortest roads to malnutrition is lack of sufficient and restful sleep. Young children need a nap or rest at midday. They need plenty of fresh air and sunshine. This is the path to health.

What's in Fashion?

Comfortable Living Rooms

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

RIGHT NOW, this just-about-the-end-of-January time, furnishing a home becomes a popular indoor sport.

Maybe it's a pair of about-to-be-newly-weds planning everything for their new home. And what fun that is—with everything new and fresh at once!

What kind of furniture do they want? They want the furniture that's fashionable of course, because the furniture that's in fashion is the best looking, most comfortable furniture there is.

And we'll start with the living room, because that's the room used most of all.

Right now it has four bare walls, bare floor, some curtainless windows and some lights. It looks rather like a barn—cheerless and empty—doesn't it? Well —let's get a rug down quickly. Right away the room will look more cheerful and less like the wide open spaces. The hollow, empty echo will disappear.

We said, "Let's get a rug down quickly." But not too quickly. There's the matter of harmony and ensemble to consider. Decidedly it's the fashion to ensemble rooms just as it is to ensemble costumes. And assembling means having everything look as though they belonged together. Not match. That would be monotonous. But go together nicely.

A Oriental Type

One of the easiest rugs to harmonize with various kinds of furniture is one of oriental type. And it doesn't have to be a real oriental, either. A faithful domestic copy is just as fashionable.

The easiest kind of oriental to fit into any room—and the one that's most in fashion—is a pattern that almost completely fills the rug. It has many, but harmonizing colors, and it's the kind generally known as Persian type.

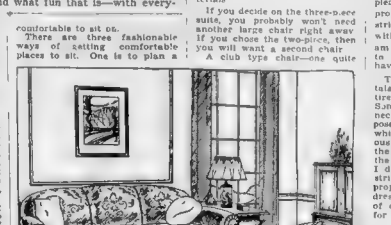
Now in selecting the pattern, let's half close our eyes and look at it. If the effect is almost one or two colors, that's fine. It's going to make upholstery choosing much easier.

If the effect is spotty—of many colors—then we'll have to be careful to get plain colors in our upholsteries and draperies. Otherwise our color scheme might give the effect of a costume of red, white and blue polka dot dress worn with a green hat.

Probably the easiest kind of floor covering to ensemble with anything is plain broadloom carpeting. (Broadloom is carpeting woven in various widths without a seam.) It's fashionable laid in wall to wall—covering the entire floor—or made into a rug. And either way it's a fine background on which to place interesting small rugs with patterns in them.

Well—there's a little thinking done about floor covering. Now we need to plan for something comfortable to sit on.

There are two fashionable ways of getting comfortable places to sit. One is to plan a very individual room with every piece different—but every piece in harmony with every other. Another way that lots of people like is to have a sofa and two chairs in the same design—a three-piece suite.



A FASHIONABLE TWO-PIECE SUITE with easy curves and the popular Queen Anne type leg

Two-Piece Suites

A third way—the middle road —is a two-piece suite . . . sofa and one chair to match. And that gives a good group to start on—and every fashionable modern room is made up of grouped pieces—yet it allows plenty of opportunity for variety and individuality in the rest of the chairs and other furniture.

We've had one important fashion in two-piece suites sketched below. You can see how well upholstered and comfortable looking, yet not so massive as to seem to crowd you out of the room, if the room is small.

This has pleasantly curved lines and the curved foot that is known as the Queen Anne foot. And if you want a three piece suite in this design, you can have it. It's one of the most popular and fashionable of all. Better still, you can have this type at almost any price your pocketbook will stand. The general appearance similar to the one in the club type suite illustrated—will go with either suite. Deep seated, low slung, well upholstered. A good place to relax in after you've made your first million or while you're on the way to it

There are at least three table fashions that fit in nicely. One is that circular, six-sided table that stands on many legs or on a central pedestal. This is fine if you always want it the same size.

But if you like to vary the size of your table, a drop-leaf type like the gate-leg or the Pembroke is convenient. Both are equally useful. The drop leaves on the gate-leg are held up by the gate that swings out.

With draperies hung at the windows and carefully ensembled with the other colors in the room, our living room now has a substantial beginning. Already it looks like something and we can invite you to come in and visit with us

Wear Your Crystals at Night

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

To settle a question, will you please let us know whether it is proper or all right to wear long string of crystals in the evening with a low cut sleeveless dress? I am told that these beads are only to be worn with dresses which have sleeves and high neck.

This question of wearing crystals in the evening depends entirely on the type of necklace. Sometimes, mainly when the necklace is short and is composed of especially lovely crystals, which are particularly harmonious with the color and type of the dress, a crystal necklace is the perfect necklace to wear. But I doubt very much if the long string of crystals would be very appropriate with a dark sleeveless dress. One thinks of a long string of crystals as more appropriate for wearing with a daytime dress

Exchanging Photographs

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

1. When exchanging your graduation pictures with your friends whose address you know, should your name be signed, just "Yours truly, Dick," or "Respectfully yours, Richard," or "Richard Brown."?

2 If a girl asks to exchange pictures, should I consent?

A READER.

1. These forms are too businesslike. Of course, it isn't necessary to autograph your photograph at all . . . many maintain that it is more personal when not signed . . . but if you do, it might be something like this:

TO DOROTHY,
FROM TOM.

TO DOROTHY
WITH FRIENDLY GREETINGS
FROM TOM.

2. That would be the only courtly thing for you to do . . . even if you don't care so much to do it

But remember that no photographs should be exchanged unless the person to whom we are giving it especially requests that we do this.

Referring to a Relative

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

When a person speaks of his or her aunt to a friend, is it proper to say "Aunt Carrie" or "My Aunt," or are both correct?

H S

If the person to whom you are speaking knows your aunt, so that the first name identifies her, it would be reasonable to refer to your aunt as "Aunt Carrie." If not, "my aunt" would be the logical thing to say

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

TIGER HEART -:- -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

She was sorry for Jim, for the blasting of his marriage plans, his humiliation, and the hurt he must have suffered. And for Kitty too, she had an aching regret at the girl's niggardly past; what the future held for Kitty depended upon a Fate, at best, capricious. Individually, these did not present problems excessively grave, but placed together, they had the material of a conflagration

The situation wanted looking after, and should not be allowed to drift on negligently. Kitty ought to be protected from drifting into an affair with Jim, or, what might be worse, marriage

She Knew Jim

All thought of intervention, Connie reasoned, lay in her superior knowledge of Jim's character, and that knowledge was increasing. She saw him, now, as a weakling of society; as a seeker, perhaps unconsciously, of uncarned money; as a creature whose affections might be as attainable as they were intense. He was a natural philanderer, although circumstances heretofore had covered up that fact

Against him, Kitty ought to be protected. In that Connie attained a selfless viewpoint. It was serious to interfere with anyone's natural drift, but the possibilities of deception for Kitty were too great to be ignored. Her life experience had not fitted her to comprehend the sterility of Jim's nature; Jim, herself, with for more social success, had indeed been deceived until recently. Jim would take everything she had to offer and return nothing; and attempted hypnosis had been typical of him would inevitably end disastrously. The hard underworld wisdom of Kitty would not help her in this; she would be, practically, at the mercy of Jim's refined complexity. His would be the art of appearing vastly superior to any man Kitty ever met. He knew, too, how to reach a woman's heart

Already, perhaps, he was visioning himself captivating Kitty; he would be unconscious that Kitty was to share whatever guilt Connie possessed. As a matter of fact, the money was not as plentiful as people might suppose. Always the tendency was to overestimate another's wealth. From odd remarks he had dropped, Connie realized that Jim imagined there was more of the Calvert money than really existed. He would look upon Kitty as a prize to possess.

And, abruptly, Connie checked this line of reasoning. It was verging upon pettiness. Unless guarded, it might turn into animosity. The proposition was such that she could not discuss it with her mother; she would have to keep it concealed behind her outward conduct.

In the morning she faced the obligation of disciplining herself straighten out Kitty's financial status. This was a matter of honor and had to be attended to. It would be share and share between each girl. What belonged to Mrs. Calvert was here excitedly; only Connie's resources were involved

Breakfasting with her mother in the latter's bedroom, Connie made this plain.

Only Money

"After all, it's only money and nothing to worry about," Mrs. Calvert said. "A large part of what I have came from my mother's estate, and, of course, you won't be much, if any, worse off by dividing your with Kitty; I'll see to that. You had better get in touch with Brant and have him straighten it out."

Brant was their New York lawyer. A long-distance call to him brought the information that he was out of town for a week. And, perforce, the dividing was postponed until he returned.

The Rhyming Optimist

Groping

—By ARLINE MICHAELIS—

How every man goes by with outstretched hands,
How every look is lifted, each heart hoping
For clues to peace, though no man understands.
I see, sometimes, how bliss is for the taking,
How each might yet be glad would he but learn
That in his hand alone he has the making
Of all the joys for which his soul may yearn
How kindly are the beings all about us,
How tender is the purpose in each breast,
How loath our brothers are to harm or doubt us,
I ask men all are groping for life's best!

Like Dream

"There isn't much to do—except live," Connie acknowledged. "I think we'll be rather inconspicuous this summer, on account of my broken engagement with Jim, but we can read and ride and see some of our friends. That might sound awfully lazy to you, Kitty, but I assure you the mere business of staying alive is an occupation and for mother's sake, I think the house should be rather quiet this summer. You must find it dull, but I don't think you will."

Kitty smiled

"It's all so new to me that I won't be dull for a minute," she said a thrill in her voice. "There's even ever so much I've got to life for; for instance, I don't even know how to drive a car."

"I'll teach you anytime," Connie offered.

"That's swell of you—but you won't have to bother. Jim said he would teach me himself. He's coming over some time today in his roadster and take me out."

Connie was upstairs when Jim Drew arrived, but Kitty was downstairs waiting.

"We're going out now," she called upstairs. Then in a low voice Connie heard her ask, "We won't be gone long, will we?"

Jim Tracy's reply was lost, but he called upstairs, "Coming, Connie—Don't you want to come along Connie—"

"Thanks, but I can't get away," Connie said, coming down the stairs. "I want to look in on mother for an hour or two."

"Right!" Jim exclaimed "Well, we'll be back in time for dinner, anyway. You might ask a fellow in to eat, Connie. Remember, it's your fault that I'm loafing around and lonesome with a lot of empty homesmoon time on my hands to kill."

"Of course; come back to dinner, Jim," she told him. "Don't let him try to teach you to drive in the traffic, Kitty. Make him keep on a quiet road."

"Oh, sure, we'll be careful," Kitty assured her.

Ate Alone

The dinner hour had come and gone. Connie and her mother, who had come downstairs, ate alone, but Jim and Kitty had not returned. Mrs. Calvert, still careful of expending her nervous energy until she was a bit stronger went back upstairs.

"It seems like I can't get enough rest," she said, "but I'll be all right in a few days. You might look in before you go to bed, dear, and if I'm sleeping don't bother."

Connie, alone and waiting in the deepening dusk on the veranda, made a futile effort to arouse herself out of what threatened to become an annoying state of suspicion. It began to appear as though Jim and Kitty were deliberately disregarding her. She told herself, thank heaven, that she was not jealous. It was only that she wanted to shield Kitty from what, inevitably, would be a serious error.

'Short Life and Merry One'—Perhaps

By WINIFRED BLACK

JOSEPHINE is on a diet. And she hates it. She loathes it.

No, she isn't dieting to get thin; she is dieting to keep alive.

Josephine can't go to any more parties—and if she has to diet she does not want parties, either at home or at the homes of other people.

Josephine has had to stop coffee—and teas—and bread and potatoes and never a sip of wine—even by way of a doctor's prescription.

Winifred Black

And Josephine is bored to tears She told me about it this morning.

"I'm trying to make up my mind what to do," said Josephine. "There really is a choice of two paths for me, either one of them I can walk with courage, and with, what seems to me, a kind of primitive humor.

"The first path is the obvious one. Take the doctor's advice Cut everything I like out of life. Shut myself up in a nice airy room and watch the clouds and the sunsets, and forget that there is any world of streets, and people and anywhere.

"I can't read, you see—something is wrong with my eyes and I have to think because I always keep remembering something that I'd like to forget. a

"It's easy to drop two of things—very easy, okay at home to yourself for six weeks, and end a soul will know what has happened to you—and not a soul will care. I don't blame them

"Life is so full of work, and joy and sorrow, nobody has time to remember the left behinds

I can do this kind of thing, make up my mind to it and just mark time till the day the doctor makes his last visit. Lots of people would be glad of a chance to to mark time comfortably to the end

"The other road? Oh, that's simple enough, too

"Just go on living as I always have eating what I like, drinking when I am thirsty, laughing, singing, partying, through the rest of my life

"And when I feel that I am close to the end of my rope—do the Old English—give a big party with all the forbidden foods, and drink and all the gay, frivolous, amusing people and—lights out —forever

"I'm going to make up my mind about it in the next two or three days, and whichever road I choose I'm going to walk down it—alone, with my head up and flags flying.

"Nobody's going to be sorry for me, nobody is going to pity me, nobody's going to be 'good to me.'

It's my life after all, and my death that I'm gambling for, and I'm going to gamble for them both—in my own way."

Josephine opened a nice, flowery, rose-colored bag she had under the pillow of her reclining chair. Out of the bag she took a $5 gold piece

She held the gold piece on the back of her hand and balanced it

Heads the Doctor, and the program Tails—the Old English

And I wished Josephine luck and went away a little dazed

I rather wish I knew which side of the coin is coming to the top when she throws it into the air tomorrow—don't you?

Short Steps on Beauty Path

Hints to Enhance Milady's Charm

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

RINSES for the hair often prove drying unless this condition is anticipated. Those of you who like to add that ultimate sheen and tinge to your tresses (and who among us don't) will find that a plan which permits you to alternate your color rinse with one of vinegar water will work out very nicely.

Some women try to overcome the slight dryness which is apt to occur by having a vinegar rinse after the color rinse. This is not advisable, however, for the color rinse is so mild that the vinegar water frequently counteracts its color effect on the hair.

Incidentally this dryness I'm speaking of is not sufficient to harm the actual texture of the hair permanently, however, the secret of success in this line in keeping the texture soft at all times as the slightest coarseness effects the color rinse.

Therefore, have your color rinse one week and then the next week substitute a vinegar rinse. This will solve the problem perfectly for you and will make a noticeable change in the color of your hair

A fine hand lotion which has proven especially successful in the treatment of rough, chapped hands is made of glycerin and spirits of camphor. Equal parts of glycerin and spirits of camphor are used to compound the lotion. Wash the hands thoroughly in lukewarm (never hot) water and dry. After drying them carefully apply a generous amount of the lotion

Work the lotion well into the skin and then, about half an hour later, repeat the treatment. This will clean and whiten the skin and hands within a remarkably short time

The glycerin is an old favorite with many of you because it softens the skin so well. Camphor is the bleaching element, and although it dries the skin when used alone, the glycerin counteracts this effect.

Before hanging up wet clothes, wash the hands carefully and then after having rinsed the soap from the skin pour a little vinegar over the hands and rub it in well. Rinse off your hands and then rinse off the vinegar with clear, cool water. You'll find that the texture of the skin is positively soft and smooth, although the hands are red from the exposure to the air. This redness soon disappears, however, leaving the hands in good condition

Financial Market News, Stocks, Bonds, Commodities and Comment

Baker's Words Carry Unique Significance

Bit of Inside History Is Revealed by Forbes; Cheerier Outlook

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Jan 26—The most significant happening of the week was a two-sentence expression of opinion.

That must sound ridiculous to nine out of every 10 people. The 10th, however, will unanimously endorse that observation.

George F. Baker dean of American bankers, head of the Baker Interests, is by nature one of the most cautious of business and stock market conditions. His first comment was:

"There are some slight indications of improvement in business conditions since second times."

His second, when asked if I was this reported:

"Any many who sells short on the sky the market at this man is showing very poor judgment."

Why should such remarks, no different from those made a hundred times by banking and business leaders, convey so much more weight in the highest circles?

Mr. Baker is the only banking leader now one contemporary with and ranked with the late J. P. Morgan and James Stillman. His judgment was superior rather than second to theirs. He is the most profitably-run bank in America; it pays 20 per cent in dividends and earns 200 per cent on its ultra-conservative capital Mr. Baker's fortune, thanks to his unique ability, is greater than that amassed by either Morgan or Stillman.

This veteran's analysis of business and security market conditions has long been sought more eagerly than that of any other financier. While he has been seriously ill for weeks, his intimates he never once or week could be persuaded to say anything for publication.

Let me reveal a bit of unwritten history which will help to explain the importance attached to anything emanating from George F. Baker.

When the stock market was sinking to new low levels last fall, and when security loans in the financial panic were paralyzing financial New York, I learned unofficially that Mr. Baker had reached the conclusion that there was not justification for the continuing weeks and worse demoralization. So I opened negotiations with a view to having Mr. Baker allow me to quote him to that effect. The matter was taken up with Mr. Baker, his associates and other powerful parties.

After discussion and very careful consideration, the conclusion reached by them and him was that, since Mr. Baker has never in his life made any stock market statement, a reassuring expression from him might be interpreted as implying that things were much more perilous than the public imagined.

The very fact that Mr. Baker now feels warranted in making a cheerful comment is, therefore, extremely significant. He is much too honest to say anything he did not sincerely feel and mean.

I rather think that the more powerful bears—if any very powerful bears there still are—will be more influenced by Mr. Baker's pronouncement than by anything else that could have been said or by any actual development.

LEADERS SEE WORST OVER FOR BUSINESS

By FRANK H MELOON

American leaders during the last week have shown unanimity in expressing the opinion that the worst period of business has ended. The statement of Owen D. Young, head of General Electric and a former Bostonian, that it seemed certain the depression had struck bottom and a definite encouragement.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Auburn Auto again showed a which was increased during the year by four quarterly stock dividends of 1 per cent.

Tobaccos in Good Investment Demand

Tobacco issues today were again in good investment demand. Holders of American Tobacco issues who were frightened last week by announcement of the termination of direct selling t a big chain drugstore saw a small rally stage. Passed on production, the snuff companies, which include United States Tobacco and George W. Helme must have had a good 1930. Snuff production amounted to 40,112,663 pounds, against 40,036,964 pounds in preceding year. The snuff company stocks were strong all through the big decline, and still are not far below their highs of last year.

Comparatively few people realize the extent of snuff using and most think it is practically obsolete. Thousands of storekeepers in cities and towns will tell anyone there is an important demand for snuff.

Int. Telephone Hits Best Price on Move

Columbia Gas, Consolidated and United Corporation led activity in the utility group, and International Telephone reached the best levels on the move.

Bond Offerings in Big Volume

New offerings of bonds during past two weeks, totaling $362,898,000, constituted heaviest volume of such financing in single fortnight in six months. Reception of recent issues exceeded most optimistic predictions, and number of small orders received for bonds indicated individual investors are becoming interested once more in bond market.

J. I. Case Shows Further Strength

J. I. Case showed further strength today by moving up around 3 points while selling was going on steadily in the list. Manufacturing implement makers show mixed outlook. Farmak, ant of International Harvester Co., of Rock Island, Ill., will probably not increase present production until April or May. It is operating three days a week and employing about 1600 or approximately half the number employed at the time last year.

To help alleviate unemployment in that division, heavy production of tractors will be continued through summer and early fall of 1930 with result that inventory was substantially reduced. It is understood the company has a large number of Farmall tractors stored in warehouses at factory and elsewhere, and until a material portion of this supply is disposed of and outlook for future is more definite, production at Farmall plant will probably not exceed its present pace.

Sales competition in the farm equipment industry, especially the tractor division, is considered keener than at several years.

Hammond Clock Doubles Budget

Advertising budget of the Hammond Clock Company for the first six months of 1931 will be twice as large as in the corresponding period of 1930, officials stated today. Action of the management in doubling the advertising appropriation is in line with the steadily increasing demand which has been noted for synchronous electric clocks, the company's sole product.

WIGGIN BLAMES SPECULATION FOR CRASH

Washington, Jan 26 (AP) A "firmer policy," which would maintain the Federal Reserve rediscount rate higher than the market rate on commercial paper, and higher rates on bond borrowing than on commercial borrowing, were suggested today by Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York, as possible steps to prevent stock speculating booms.

Testifying before the Senate banking committee, Wiggin blamed the 1929 Wall Street collapse on the debauch of speculation that reached a climax and stopped

"It was not due, in his opinion, to any evil in the banking system.

Questioned by Senator Walcott, Republican, Connecticut, who presided in the absence of Chairman Glass, who was suffering from a cold, Mr. Wiggin said if the National Banking and Federal Reserve Act were to be amended, he would liberalize them rather than enact additional restrictions.

Wiggin said abolition of "bottle feeds" on loans to brokers made by member banks on behalf of individuals and corporations would not help a bit.

"I would like to see them controlled, but it can't be done," he added.

He said it would be unwise to attempt by changes in the law to restrict the flow of Reserve System credit for stock market operations.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

1929 to date, 92,569,240

New York, Jan. 26—Railroad shares again were pushed into the front late today, lifting New York Stock Exchange from its lethargy. The closing was strong.

The bond market maintained its recent gains fairly well. The upturn in stocks was stimulated by active short covering in some of the specialties by shorts who had expected a technical reaction.

SOME SHARP GAINS

A few made sharp gains, but progress generally was moderate. The advance started in the rails evidently based on a favorable interpretation of the Interstate Commerce Commission's recommendation for repeal of the earnings limitation clause of the Interstate Commerce Act.

The share list failed to develop much vitality until the final hour, as tomorrow's U. S. Steel statement caused considerable hesitancy. The list was apparently uninfluenced by dispatches from Washington quoting the chairman of the Chase bank as saying the public will get over its stock market losses.

High fliers were Frisco, up 8, and Auburn, up 7. Shares closing 2 to 4 higher included American Telephone, Case, New York Central, Allchison, Eastman, Worthington and Foster Wheeler.

STEELS ARE HIGHER

U. S. Steel, General Electric, General Motors and American Can were only up fractionally. Bethlehem Steel, Woolworth, Consolidated Gas and Westinghouse Electric gained one or more. Radiart Warner lost 2½ on its dividend omission.

While the forthcoming final quarter earnings statements of the large steel companies will largely represent water over the dam, they are not regarded lightly in the financial district.

Indications are that steel production during January will average close to that of November, and substantial improvement during February and March will be necessary to make any distinctly favorable showing for the first quarter. Nevertheless, the fact that prices are a little higher will enhance the result.

A break in corn futures in new low levels for the season may have been an adverse influence on the share market. Farm commission shares, however, were conspicuously strong, along with J. I. Case.

While Case's strength appeared to be largely the result of an overextended short interest, the weekly advices of one of the prominent statistical organizations spoke favorably of the leading farm implements in long-term investments while pointing out that improved earnings might be some time in appearing.

Credit rates in this market were unchanged, with call money ready offers outside at 5 per cent. Considerable interest was shown, however, in a sharp rise in time loan acceptances in London, carrying them well above 2 per cent, against 1½ bid for short-term dollar acceptances here.

This should strengthen sterling exchange and tend to remove the danger of a flow of gold to New York.

$7.33 A SHARE ON NEW HAVEN

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co. today reports a surplus, after all charges, including preferred dividends and guarantees, for the month of December, 1930, of $1,151,040, and for the calendar year 1930 a surplus of $11,508,892, equivalent to $7.33 per share of common. Compared with the same month of 1929, when $807,000 non-recurring revenues of back mail pay and disputed divisions were included, this is a decrease of $734,819.

For the 12 months period, when these non-recurring revenues in 1928 amounted to $4,270,000, the surplus after charges shows a decrease of $6,011,845.

Total operating revenues for the month were $9,016,791, as compared with $11,474,859 in 1929, and for the year, total operating revenues were $118,885,518, as compared with $142,458,470 in 1929.

Stewart-Warner's Dividend Omitted

Stewart-Warner Corp. directors omitted the dividend on the common, 75 cents, October 25, 1930, and July 28, 1930, it declared dividends of 50 cents each. On April 25, 1930, a dividend of 25 cents was paid, prior to which the stock was on a $3.50 annual cash basis.

Life Insurance Co. to Help Home Building

Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. will advance $1,320,000 on first mortgage for construction of 600,000 wage-earners housing project in Bronx, New York. Project includes eight buildings occupying 140,000 square feet. Monthly rentals will average $11.

Waldorf Earnings Set a New Peak

James J. Curry, president of Waldorf System, Inc., states that Waldorf 1930 net profits after all year-end adjustments exceed $1,215,000, setting a new high record for all time. Next best year was 1929, when net was $1,205,547.

Grains Are Mixed in Chicago Market

SWIFT TO ADD CANNED GOODS TO ITS LINES

Announcement that Boston-listed Swift & Company in the near future will add a complete line of canned fruits and vegetables is the first indication from any of the four large packers of any change brought about by the recent modification of the packers' consent decree. Formal announcement came from G. F. Swift, president of the company.

Mr. Swift said: "Swift & Company now is working on plans to add complete lines of canned fruits and vegetables under the Swift brands. These will be distributed to the retail dealer through our existing branch houses and over existing car routes by our present force of salesmen.

"It is a matter of gratification to the company that we will be able to use our existing facilities for the distribution, at wholesale, of a more complete line of food products. The fact that a salesman can sell a complete line rather than merely a line of meats means that savings can be effected in distributive costs.

"It is not possible at the present time to announce a definite date for adding fruits and vegetables, but it will be done without undue delay and as soon as details regarding labels can be worked out."

$5,727,530 IS B. & M. PROFIT

Boston & Maine Railroad in 1930 earned net income of $5,727,530, equal, after preferred dividends, but before sinking fund deductions, to $4.02 a share on 1,425,063 shares of common stock outstanding, it was announced today.

This compares with net income of $5,893,841 in 1929, equal, after preferred dividends, to $4.90 a common share. Net income for 1930 was only $266,311 less than in 1929 notwithstanding a reduction of $9,203,103 in operating revenues due to depressed business conditions. This reduction in income included a reduction of $8,675,032 in freight revenues and a reduction of $1,835,841 in passenger revenues.

To meet decline in traffic, operating expenses were reduced sharply, aggregating $8,533,336 less than in 1929. As a result, an operating ratio of 73.4 per cent, 2.3 per cent lower than in the preceding year, was attained.

NEWS OF THE PORT OF BOSTON

By JAMES J. DELANEY

After traversing 6000 miles of the Atlantic Ocean in 14 days, 182 passengers who made the round-trip cruise from Boston to the West Indies, inaugurated by the Canadian National Steamship Co., were brought safely home in the new R. M. S. Prince Robert, which docked at Commonwealth Pier.

Preparing for her next cruise which will leave Commonwealth Pier on Jan. 31, the Prince Robert is now at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp Simpson Plant at East Boston where she will have her big engines examined today.

Prominent among the passengers was the Rev. Thomas R. Frazier of Peabody; the Rev. Neil S. Hurley of South Boston; Samuel C. L. Hasker of Medford, potentate of Alleoo Temple Mystic Shrine of Boston; Mrs. Hazel Hankell; John Gilmartin, city treasurer of Portland, Me.; and a group of 41 singing bathers from Jersey City. The members of the Jersey City Master Bathers' Singing Association, who entertained on the trip

ROUGH TRIP

Handicapped by heavy weather, high seas and icy decks, the vanguard of the fishing fleeting coming into the Fish Pier for the Monday market offered little hope that a change would come in the poor showing that was made last week. Stormy weather was reported throughout the time they fished around Georges Bank. Spray thrown upon the vessels would solidify into ice that had to be chopped away. The steamer Boston came in with only 2000 pounds, due to the fact that her gear broke down and she was forced in after being out five days. About 200,000 pounds was all that came in the pennons. Grand Marshal, Rainbow, Elk and Gertrude Thebaud.

SAN BLAS IN

Preserved smakes, to be used for experimental purposes, was part of the cargo brought from Cuba for the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard University, on the S.S. San Blas, United Fruit Co., which came into port with 25,000 bunches of bananas from the Cortez Development Co., to the Fruit Dock, South Boston. The San Blas also carried charcoal and coffee. Capt. George H. Grand was in command.

Sound Politics

Gov. Roosevelt's Challenge to Power Interests

The special message of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Governor of New York State, to the New York Legislature on the report of the Roosevelt-appointed St. Lawrence River Power Development Commission deserves unstinted Nation-wide praise as a challenge to the power interests of the country in behalf of the consumers large and small, especially the latter.

He shows his clear perception of the fact, long apparent, that regulation of public utilities has broken down.

He does not propose that New York State's waterpower shall be handed over to a private monopoly, with no public safeguard but "regulation," which experience has shown to be wholly ineffective.

He is right.

He does not ignore the possibility that contracts may be drawn which will be fair to the consuming public. This is intelligent and shows a desire to avoid the economic waste of an unnecessary duplication of facilities for the manufacture and distribution of power.

But contracts are arrived at only as the result of negotiations, and Governor Roosevelt does not intend that New York State shall enter upon these negotiations at a disadvantage—in other words, without alternative expedients, upon which it can fall back, should the existing monopoly demand too much and concede too little.

The Governor must know that whenever the Government has private corporations as partners the corporations swindle the Government, as exemplified in the New York City subway contracts.

And this knowledge should put him on guard in the proposed state negotiations with private companies.

He clearly intimates that failing to reach a fair agreement, the State of New York is prepared to develop its natural resources and to distribute electrical energy to the people by facilities of its own creation.

The Republicans of the New York Legislature allow their zeal in the service of the Power Trust to outrun their discretion.

Politics, forsooth!

But good politics, sound politics, the politics of actualities, with an eye single to the public interest and hewing to the line of public duty and party pledge.

Yes, We're Growing!

Marked Signs of Boston's Progress

Boston is achieving civic progress more rapidly than our casual observations would lead us to realize.

Sailings from the port increased by 23 per cent the past year.

The $16,000,000 East Boston tunnel, the plans for the intercity arterial highways and the $45,000,000 rapid-transit extensions, not to mention the Governor's Square tunnel extension, are moving steadily forward.

The Northern artery gave to us one of the finest gateways in the world.

The proposal for the marine park and boulevard in East Boston will supply us with a new arm of traffic and scenic beauty.

Now that the authorization for the development of Centre Street has been granted the city by the Legislature—what a pity that a great city must go to the State like a beggar with hat in hand—we will have in the immediate future a main artery of southern traffic which will accommodate our own convenience and improve the impression of our city among our visitors.

Mayor Curley and the planning groups thank this newspaper for its advocacy of these major developments. There is enough glory for everybody.

Curley's Plan Wins

Notable Advancement in Aviation for Boston

Congressman James of Michigan, chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, advises the Boston Evening American that Mayor Curley's plan for acquisition of Governor's Island and the development of the greatest airport probably in the world will be sent through Congress expeditiously.

As Mr. James is the sort of man who makes few promises and is quick to fulfill those he makes, the future of Boston aviation can be said to hold splendid promise.

The airport as it exists, and which represents an investment of possibly $25,000,000, is already a credit to the city.

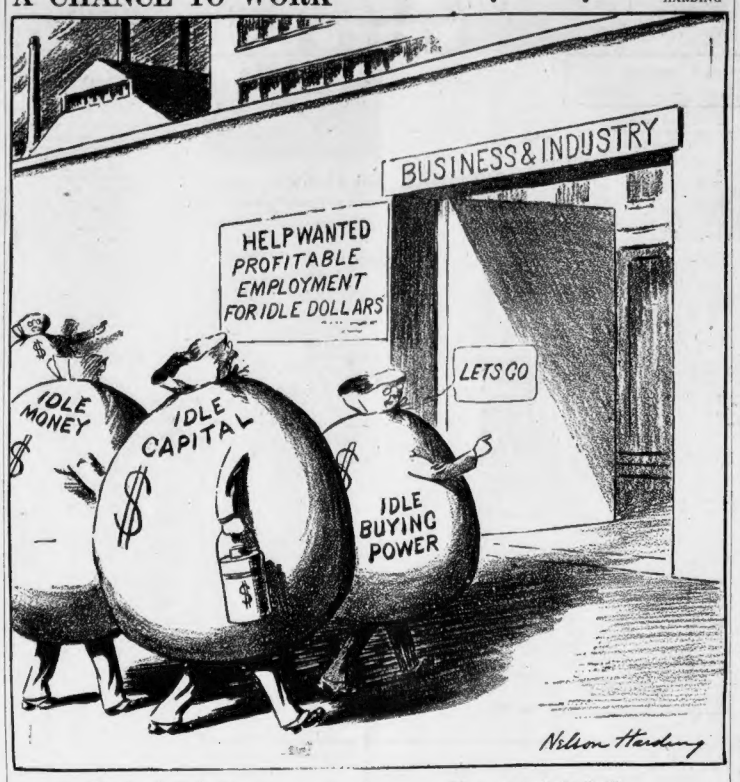
We can visualize the day in the not far-distant future when our present airport resources will be overwhelmed by New England patronage alone. And Boston is a natural mecca for coastwise, transcontinental and transatlantic commercial aviation. It should be made at once the depot for the mail brought by plane from the incoming ocean liners, because mail received here rather than at New York can be deposited in Chicago and the West a full day earlier.

The plan which Mayor Curley has conceived and which he has argued so effectively at Washington contemplates the enlargement of an airport within ten minutes of the heart of the city by the tunnel and rapid-transit facilities now being promoted to East Boston. No other airport in the East at least is within such availability of a metropolitan population.

And the plan has the added advantage of supplying useful, constructive employment.

A CHANCE TO WORK

By NELSON HARDING



There is work for idle dollars,
Profitable work awaits them,
Opportunity invites them,
Where the door is standing open.

There are bargains for the idle,

There are jobs for idle dollars

Listen, World! -:- Mother

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Must She Be a Loving One?

MUST A "good mother" be a loving one? Should a mother be emotionally excited and ecstatic about her children—should she thrill at their touch, chill at the thought of their danger, experience all the traditional delights and despairs of "mother love"? OR CAN SHE BE A GOOD AND SUCCESSFUL MOTHER WITHOUT WHAT IS COMMONLY KNOWN AS MATERNAL AFFECTION?

A strange question? And yet, if you really know mothers, it won't surprise you. For, despite tradition, NOT ALL MOTHERS ARE FOND OF THEIR CHILDREN.

Elsie Robinson

Here's one. The letter, I suspect, is written by a mother-in-law or indignant maiden aunt, for it is an outraged letter—righteously indignant at this unnatural monster.

"I know a mother of two sons," she says. "They are both handsome boys, the older ten and the younger five years of age. They're devoted to their mother, but she, although she is kind to them, HAS NO MOTHER LOVE. Their father adores them, but the home is not happy because of this lack in the mother. She knows of her fault. She lies awake at night and prays over it and asks God's help. But she can't change. Since her own childhood she has never felt warm affection for children. Don't you think that this will prove disastrous for the boys? ISN'T IT HER DUTY TO LEAVE THEM AND LET THE FATHER BRING THEM UP ALONE? Mrs. A. J. C.

Dr. Watson should have the answering of that letter—though his answer would probably start a considerable riot. For, far from believing that mother love is necessary or even an asset in raising a child, Dr. Watson believes it is a menace.

The FONDEST heart is not always the FAIREST. Indeed it is often the most unfair. Emotional contact with the mother hinders quite as often as it helps. It is not true that "there is nothing on earth like a mother's love." There are many things on earth, healthier and wiser for children than the love of some mothers. And the world would have been spared many a coward and crook and weakling, if some of us had been born orphans.

What is love, anyway? Is it an affair of the head or the heart? Is it a desire to coddle and cuddle and kiss? Or is it a determination to play fair, to guide and, sensibly, guard? That depends on the one who is doing the loving. There is no set pattern for love. Each of us loves in a different way.

A cool mother may, in the long run, prove to be the best mother, she may turn out braver, better balanced citizens . . . freer souls. And, on the other hand, an adoring mother may be, because of her emotional nature, a constant irritant—nagging, jealous, fearful, suspicious. For a mother is quite as beset by selfishness and silliness as any other mortal. Love, like charity, covers a multitude of sins. And an innocent child is often the tragic victim of Too Much Mama.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Diary of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, Jan. 26—Diary of a modern Pepys: This day a gentleman wearing white spats, pufftie and frock coat used persuasive eloquence to secure a fairish sum to make us, as he put it, "rich beyond dreams of avarice." But gazing at him I could think only of Marks, the lawyer, in Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Came a jug of brandy with a music box inside which played upon lifting the stopper and so through the town. And on 6th avenue a tipsy policeman lurched against me mumbling: "Whuz you tryin' to do?" To which I replied: "Mind my own business," surprised at my sudden bravado.

In the evening to a stag dinner at the Metropolitan Club and among those attending were John Hearst, Ray Long, Frazier Hunt, Harold Ross, Charles Hanson Towne, Charles Francis Coe, Dave Town and Floyd Gibbons. And Montague Glass and E. D. Coblenz told dialect stories amazingly neat.

New York's most extravagantly eulogized sophisticate is Peter Arno, artist, who created the Whoops Sisters. In his late 20's, he is the leading good natured sneerer of things as they are. Native born, Arno is the son of Supreme Court Justice A-noux Peters, the "Peter Arno" being his pseudonym. Early he showed talent for the piano, went to Yale and organized a college orchestra. For a time he tickled the ivories at Gil Boag's Rendezvous, accompanying the torso titubations of Gilda Gray.

Arno's career was largely an accident. He presented his Whoops Sisters, two bonneted and cockney ladies with a jovial commoness, to Life, which returned it by the first mail. Judge then rejected it, but The New Yorker, faintly struggling for notice, accepted it. This launched both the artist and the magazine on the top wave.

Arno is a striking replica of a collar ad boy, glorified by the brothers Lyendecker. He has the perfect profile and aeroplane shoulders and wears any one of his reputed 36 suits with a dash. In public he is self effacing and belies the tabloid tattle of his extraordinary exuberances.

Ned Weyburn is to direct one of the spring revues, thus returning to a field he abandoned to conduct a dance academy. He is the strictest of all stage disciplinarians. Back of footlights he is known as "High Pockets." He thunders and barks through rehearsals, stopping at frequent intervals to let go a searing squelch. Legend has it that he once worked an entire company into such fury that, standing in the wings, a cast iron bar grazed him. He missed avenging death by an eyelash. Yet Weyburn has turned out as many musical show dance stars as any other instructor.

At the peak of the economic eclipse a millionaire household, consisting of a father, mother, two daughters and a son, dismissed 16 servants, leaving a paltry 14 to do the work. Thus illustrates another horror of the rich in the wonder city.

A gentleman of Wall Street writes in to know if we had in our town a specialist in biting off tails of puppy dogs. We had, and furthermore he was a man of other talents, chief of which were stopping runaways and balancing three pool balls on top of each other.

Man and boy, I have run across several men bearing the name of Eric. As in fiction so in real life each was a superior and distant person with a sort of worldly affluence. So, somehow, I began to abhor all Erics until last evening. This Eric was a taxi driver who carried me on a lonely spin through Central Park to a West Side apartment. At the destination, he said:

"You're the second mug I druv through the park today stalkin' to himself. See?—pointing to a mirror—"I can pike you in that."

Both his candor and smile were warming and I rather hope it is the beginning of a beautiful friendship. Yet I feel pretty silly.

A year ago jittering out loud on a dark deserted street, I collided with a stranger. "Lost my dog!" I lied. And the poor sap searched around with me 15 minutes for an imaginary pooch.

Wickersham Report A Disappointment And a Failure

By BAINBRIDGE COLBY

Secretary of State in President Wilson's Cabinet

EXASPERATION is the only word to describe the temper of the country on reading the report of the Wickersham Commission. Did we say "reading" the report?

No one could struggle through its eighty thousand words without verbal asphyxiation.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY

The mere suggestion stirs our sympathy for the old lady who read the dictionary from cover to cover, only to find that "she had not caught the thread of the story."

What a pity that we could not have had a sane, coherent and explicit report—a manly and courageous pronouncement upon an experiment in legislation which the nation regards as a disappointment and a failure!

That it is a failure, even the members of the Commission, who disagree on so many points, are in accord with the popular verdict, long since reached.

And not only a disappointment and a failure, but fraught with catastrophic evils to the nation at large.

The appalling growth of crime, its organization on a frank basis of business efficiency, the growing disrespect for all laws and, generally, the sad moral havoc which the people have suffered as the result of constitutional prohibition, are known to all men. No elaborate "fact-finding" was needed to confirm the obvious, to reveal what everyone sees and to establish the undisputed.

It was for rescue from these conditions, that the country looked to the Wickersham commission. It hoped for the bread of an enlightened solution, but it receives only the stone of a confused and engulfing verbosity.

However, there are some gains for the principle of rationality in legislation to be noted in the report.

In the first place, not a single one of the eleven members of the commission believes that the present system of prohibition has been a success. The importance of this is not to be underestimated.

It establishes a new point of departure in our further grappling with the problem.

It sounds the death knell of prohibition as it has been preached—hardly as it has been practiced—during the last ten years; the end of that bigotry of thought, which, clinging to a fixed idea, is incapable of instruction by experience, and insensible to its lessons.

In the second place, while the commission is united in its declaration of opposition to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, two of its members express their individual attitude as favoring repeal (strange inconsistency) and five are in favor of a revision of the amendment.

But more significant than this majority against the amendment, the remaining four accept the proposal of a "revision" of the amendment (which simply means the substitution of something else), after one more effort to enforce it—a sort of die-hard and last-ditch effort to do what has proved impossible throughout ten years of desperate effort.

The "revision" which all the members of the commission accept in principle, should this final effort at enforcement fail—as it must inevitably, since nothing is suggested which has not already been tried—substitutes congressional control of liquor legislation for the Eighteenth Amendment. The legislative treatment of the subject would thus be responsive to the popular will, and a question of personal habit or usage, upon which opinion varies with times and localities, would not be held forever in the granite grip of a constitutional ordinance.

The commission adopts the views on this point which were expressed by Mr. Hearst in a Nation-wide address over the radio from Los Angeles on November 2. The objections to state control—which would result from the "repeal" of the amendment, as distinguished from "revision"—were recognized by Mr. Hearst, who declared that the federal government should retain control of liquor legislation.

But in its timorous approach to this grave national problem, the commission stops here. Mr. Hearst goes on and outlines, with courage and vision, comprehensive proposals which have for their aim a practical and lasting solution of the admitted evils of the situation.

"There is no question," said he, "that the policy of prohibition, as far as intent is concerned, was a noble experiment.

"But there is equally no question that in operation it has proved an ignoble failure."

In addition to retention of federal control, he proposed to allow restricted manufacture of alcoholic beverages under federal licenses; to monopolize the distribution of such alcoholic beverages, maintaining a high standard of quality and price; and the sale of such alcoholic beverages, preferably light wines and beers, in limited quantities, to licensed restaurants, hotels and homes, but not to any institution whose license shall have been revoked because of misuse or abuse of its privileges.

How well this outspokenness illustrates the old saying that you cannot discuss a subject without making some allusion to it.
